A PRIVATE detective, engaged to shadow jurors in the Fall-Sinclair oil case and ascertain the financial condition of "jurors," has been found. When government detectives got him he had enlisted in the Marines, and would soon have been on his way to Haiti.

ONE juror in this case, involving a rich man and a former cabinet officer accused of bribery, said, according to government testimony, that he expected, when the case was over, to have an automobile "as long as a city block."

OUR prosperous men, especially the very rich, are supposed to set a good example. At least they are interested in maintaining respect for law which protects them, first of all.

What impression is made on the average mind when a detective agency "trails" members of the Fall-Sinclair oil jury, plainly seeking some juror that might be bought?

SUPPOSE a detective agency went about examining rich men's houses to find how burglars might most easily break in. Would that be tolerated? Evidently an attack on the jury system in the interest of high finance is different from a burglar's attack on the back door of prosperity.

MR. DWIGHT MORROW, recently of J. P. Morgan & Co., is learning about other political methods in Mexico. Three days ago he was eating ham and eggs on President Calles' ranch. Today he reads that Calles' men caught Gen. Gomez, a rebel against Calles. Gomez was caught, fleeing through a Mexican canyon. Five minutes later he was dead.

President Calles does not mince matters, and those that oppose him, if wise, conduct their opposition across the Mexican border, not on Calles' side.

MARCELINE, famous clown, rose to the top of his profession. Millions laughed at him, children especially, as he went about, with bright pink nose, baggy clothes, always serious.

He lies on a slab in the New York morgue today. Nobody claimed his body, after he shot himself to death, alone, poor, in a miserable furnished room. Photographs showing him in the day of his glory were spread before him on the bed, as he kneeled to blow his brains out.

"LAUGH, and the world laughs with you. Weep, and you weep alone," Ella Wheeler Wilcox wrote her well known poem the morning after her first party, when she was seventeen.

In the train, going to the party, she saw a woman weeping. Her dead husband was in the baggage car. Mrs. Wilcox said: "I thought I could never smile again, after crying with that poor woman. But I went to the party and danced all night. I wrote the poem when I woke up in the morning, ashamed to think how easily I had forgotten."

Poor Marceline, now on his cold slab, learned also that the world forgets easily.

THE Rev. G. A. S. Kennedy, British, says, "Britain stopping famines and plagues in India has sent the population from 100 to 300 millions. Now Hindus want to get into Africa, where there is more room."

European races in South Africa are attending to that.

Absence of plagues and famines in Asia has increased population there also. And they are anxious to get into the United States. That also will be attended to.

LORD ESHER says there were only 850,000,000 people on earth in 1800. Today there are about 1,800,000,000. The increase, a little more than one per cent a year, will make the population of the earth in 2020 more than 12,457,000,000.

THAT need not worry you. Henry George reminds you that if a puppy dog's tail kept on growing as it grows when he is a puppy each old dog would have a tail thirty feet long. No dog has such a tail.

To begin with Texas could feed the 1,800,000,000 people now on earth, under intensive cultivation. In the second place, flying machines will enable people to live with plenty of room for ten billion humans, on hilltops and mountains with no inhabitants today.

And in the third place, when people become highly civilized they

LESLIE SUBMITS M'GOVERN PROOF

CHECKS HIS ACE

Exhibiting photostatic copies of checks, expense accounts and letters to support his point, Senator M. G. Leslie today reiterated his charge that C. C. McGovern received $35 a day from the Pinchot administration while he was chairman of the Pittsburgh Registration Board and Controller.

Leslie repeated his accusation after McGovern had issued a statement saying that the charge "is a lie and the man who uttered it knows it is a lie."

The dispute was the high point in the verbal barrage of charges and accusations that continued unabated on the eve of tomorrow's election.

The first exhibit produced by Leslie was a photograph of a check for $2,849.75 made out to McGovern, signed by State Treasurer Samuel S. Lewis, and dated December 21, 1926, a few days before the close of the Pinchot administration.

With the check he showed photostatic copies of McGovern's expense accounts to the Department of Justice and the Insurance Department. The latter account totaled $1,950 for salary at $35 a day and $514.30 for expenses and included pay for three days in August, 1926, when McGovern was Controller. The former account, as originally presented, called for $3,530 salary and $255.45, but before being finally approved the salary item was reduced by Former Attorney General George W. Woodruff to $2,030. With this account Leslie produced a copy of a letter sent by Woodruff to McGovern, in which the former expressed his regret at being unable to approve the original account.

Senator Leslie called attention to the fact that the expense accounts showed that McGovern received $35 a day on Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day, five legal holidays.

Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, accused by McGovern of sharing with Leslie $56,000 of the profits of the Pennsylvania Underwriters' Association in 1926, dictated a hot denial from his sickbed today. "Lest there be any person so gullible as to believe anything McGovern says," said Armstrong, "I wish to brand his statement as a lie and a deliberate lie. I wish to say that Mr. McGov-

FAMINE AND FIRE TRAIL FLOOD

By International News Service.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—As the estimated death list neared 150 persons in the New England flood disaster, the menace of disease, starvation and fire loomed over the stricken area, despite news that the waters were receding.

The town of Ludlow, Vt., home town of Attorney General John G. Sargent, was reported saved from destruction by fire owing to a providential shift in the wind. The fire began in a store and spread quickly to an adjoining lumber yard. Water to fight the flames had to be drawn from the Black River.

Springfield, Vt., also underwent a fire, but the flames were subdued.

Throughout the flood region the collapse of the water mains feeding the fire-fighting system heightened the danger from fires.

Typhoid fever has broken out in several Vermont towns, according to reports received here today. The disease claimed its first victim outside Montpelier, Vt., among the flood refugees to the north of the Winooski River.

A summary of the flood toll in New England shows:

Vermont—More than half the state flood-swept, at least 125 dead, 50,000 homeless, with freshets subsiding and work of rebuilding begun.

Massachusetts—Untold millions in property damage, one town completely wiped out, 10,000 homeless as crest of Connecticut River flood passes through Springfield.

Connecticut—Already battered to damage of millions in first onslaughts of freshets, menaced by crest of flood rushing down Connecticut River.

New Hampshire—Town buried beneath water, landslides and northern part of state still menaced by freshets.

Rhode Island—Almost back to normal as Blackstone and other rivers subside after causing great damage.

Maine—Swept by gales as well as floods, nearly back to normal.

Fire Adds to the Flood Terror In Vermont

LUDLOW, Vt., Nov. 7.—(By wireless from the Associated Press-Massachusetts Institute of Technology Flood Radio Station.)—Fire which broke out early today threatened for a time to carry out the work of destruction left undone by the rising waters. Fanned by a high wind, the fire swept through a building on the river front and sparks were scattered about the town. The flames finally were put under control with water pumped from the river.

Accused

JAMES L. COSTELLA

A warrant was issued for the assistant county treasurer today on complaint of Controller C. C. McGovern, who charged that Costella, in signing the name Nat Brown to the county payroll, was guilty of fraud and embezzlement. The mysterious Brown was revealed at the Controller's audit hearing as Charles R. Haley, secret investigator for Costella's superior, Treasurer Samuel D. Foster.

M'Kechnie In, M'Innis Is Out

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Three new National League managers were installed today for the 1928 season as a result of the selection of Bert Shotten to succeed Stuffy McInnis at the helm of the Phillies and Bill McKechnie to replace Bob O'Farrell as pilot of the St. Louis Cardinals. Jack Slattery was chosen a few days ago to succeed Dave Bancroft as manager of the Boston Braves.

Shotten and Slattery have never managed a big league team before, but McKechnie led the Pittsburgh Pirates to a pennant and world championship in 1925.

Shotten managed the Syracuse club of the International League last year, but has had considerable major league playing experience. The Syracuse club is controlled by the Cardinals. Slattery coached the baseball teams at Boston College. McKechnie was ousted from his job with the Pirates after dissension in the ranks during the 1926 season. Donie Bush succeeded him.

PAY 'GHOST' TURNS UP

The so-called ghost of the county payroll, "Nat Brown," turned up in the flesh at Controller C. C. McGovern's audit hearing today and before he had taken his leave on information charging embezzlement had been made out against Assistant County Treasurer James L. Costella.

"Nat Brown" proved to be Charles R. Haley, liaison officer of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. His true identity was revealed by County Treasurer Samuel D. Foster, who explained that Haley had acted as a confidential agent and had investigated county employes suspected of having stolen tax receipts.

ADMITS SIGNING

Haley testified, and when he left the stand McGovern signed information before Alderman A. M. Maloney charging Costella, who admitted having signed the name Brown eight times to the county payroll, with embezzlement, false pretense and fraudulent entry. A warrant was issued for Foster's assistant and bail set for $3,000.

McGovern, promising to "get that money back," charged in the information that $526, presumably the amount Haley received as a secret county employe, was involved in the charges against Costella.

Foster identified "Brown" as Haley in a written statement as McGovern's audit of county business was resumed. Haley followed him to the stand and explained that from April to December of 1926 he had investigated county employes suspected of having stolen a batch of tax receipts. Haley said he couldn't remember how many individuals he had investigated or what the names of any of them were.

He had never signed the payroll, Haley admitted, and he made nothing but oral reports to Foster in the latter's office.

New Charge In Oil Jury "Fix"

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The federal investigation into jury-tampering in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial became involved this afternoon in a series of charges, counter-charges and denials.

William J. Burns, head of the detective agency that furnished 16 operatives to trail members of the jury on behalf of the defense, sprang a surprise today after he was questioned by the federal grand jury. He turned the tables on the government and announced he had presented Justice Siddons, the trial judge, with a complaint and affidavit charging a government official with having approached a member of the jury while the case was in trial.

Justice Siddons denied that he had received the Burns complaint, but both Burns and his Washington manager, Charles G. Ruddy, asserted it had been filed.

The defense's complaint was in the form of an affidavit sworn to by William Long, one of Burns' operatives. It set forth that Norman Glasscock, one of the jurors, was observed to have been approached at a local flying field by a car which investigation showed to have been registered in the

BACK COAST-TO-COAST ROAD

The plan to have the United States government construct at the earliest possible date a straight, completely paved road from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific found another influential supporter here today in Paul C. Wolff, secretary of the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh. Founded 25 years ago, it is the oldest motorists' organization in Western Pennsylvania; it has about 6,000 members and is one of the 930 constituent clubs of the American Automobile Association. The Automobile Club, from its outset, has been encouraging transcontinental motor travel. A multitude of its members have made the journey to the Pacific coast and it has accumulated a vast amount of information in regard to the condi-

McGovern recalled Foster as a witness and showed him payrolls upon which the name of Brown appeared. Foster testified that he had not signed them, after which McGovern announced that Costella, who admitted on the stand last week that he had signed Brown's name, would be prosecuted.

When McGovern asked Foster whose activities Haley had investigated, Foster, on advice of County Solicitor W. Heber Dithrich, refused to answer.

McGovern turned his attention again to the Taxpayers' Committee of Allegheny County, sponsors of the "Facts" advertisement, when he called for witnesses Mrs. Edith Oliver Rea, A. C. Lehman, J. Dawson Callery, John M. Phillips, Charles Miller and J. H. Hershberger. None answered and Attorney Henry Oliver Evans, secretary of the committee, said they would not appear unless subpenaed.

Election Duty Wins Over Call for Service on Jury

RELEASED TO ACT AS JUDGE

Election duty won over jury duty in Criminal Court today. John Walter, 320 Pearl street, asked to be excused from jury duty Tuesday and Wednesday to serve as judge of election of the Twenty-first District of the Eighth Ward. "Perhaps it would be better for you if you were not excused," observed Judge Josiah Cohen with a smile. The remark recalled to spectators the election officials charged with offenses at the recent primary and created amusement in the courtroom. Walter was excused for the two days.

Frank B. Billups, 471 Watson street, Hays borough, candidate for justice of the peace of the borough, was excused for the week by Judge James R. Macfarlane because of his candidacy.

Louis Payne, an Italian, 1114 Roland street, Wilkinsburg, was excused from jury service on his plea that he could not read or write English, nor speak it very well, although he has been in this country 44 years. "That is not long," remarked Judge Cohen dryly. Anthony E. Pfab, 4761 Liberty avenue, was excused from duty Thursday to be best man at a wedding.

Ten women and 21 men were excused out of 240 called for jury service during the first two weeks of the November term of Criminal Court, which opened today, facing an important calendar including numerous election cases and prosecutions by the Citizens League. The November grand jury was sworn before Judge Macfarlane, and Jacob A. Gross, skilled laborer, 100 South Seventeenth street, Seventeenth ward, was chosen foreman. Three were excused, constituting the body of seven men and 14 women. They were charged by Judge Macfarlane to strictly regard the duty of secrecy attached to their deliberations.

Three judges of election, to fill vacancies, were appointed today in orders handed down by Judge James R. Macfarlane in Quarter Sessions Court, James Williams, in the Seventeenth District of the Fourth Ward, in place of Samuel Louis, resigned; Elizabeth C. Hicks, in the Second District of Castle Shannon, in place of William L. Campbell, died, and John Stieff, in the Second District of the Sixth Ward, McKeesport.

will have fewer children. Providence leaves nothing important to chance.

GREECE, disturbed by assorted Bolshevism, Communism, Radicalism and heaven knows what, requests our government to tell the Greek government how we "control the Reds."

Ours is a simple method, named PROSPERITY.

Give men work with good wages and they are content. That is their nature. Give them insufficient work or underpaid work, and you will have the demonstration called "red."

If prosperity were destroyed the red color would spread here as quickly as anywhere else.

TWENTY thousand individuals in Britain, including many women, are growing orchids and find it profitable. The Dutch tulip craze has not been duplicated or any insane price offered for a "black orchid." But a single orchid sells for as much as $5,000. One collection sold for $53,000.

ORCHID raising is intricate, interesting work, with its cultivation of strange hybrids and trading in seedings and orchid spikes.

Young women that would like a beautiful occupation producing something that can be put in the savings bank might write to our Agricultural Department at Washington for advice.

COUNT CZERNIN, who was Austrian minister for Foreign Affairs in the war, thinks England, France and Germany will unite in the near future to wipe out Russian Bolshevism. That would be a considerable job. Russia, occupying one-sixth the surface of the globe, might be temporarily conquered, but wouldn't stay conquered. Besides, the young gentlemen of England, France and Germany are not anxious to go out and be shot all over again.

THE latest plan "to help the farmer" is a farmers' union that would ascertain the cost of products and fix prices that the people must pay. You can do this for railroads, but can you do it for farmers? Suppose one year you raise more potatoes than the people will eat, and next year potatoes are scarce. How will you regulate prices then?

ERASURES FOUND ON VOTES

A flagrant case of erasures of ballots was brought to light in the report of the special committee recounting the vote of the Twenty-second District of the Eighth Ward, Pittsburgh, where 203 ballots showed a total of 830 erasures. In a total registration of 264 the box showed 257 ballots, only seven persons failing to vote. Four more Republican ballots were in the box than were listed in the voters' roster.

The ballot box contained no copy of the election board's return and the figures had to be obtained from the books of the general returning board, as the County Commissioners, upon request, did not produce the official return made by the election board.

In the matter of changes, only 47 ballots in the box showed no evidence of double markings or erasures, the other 208 ballots showing markings in different hands for favored candidates, so that the board believes that the recount does not show the real vote of the district. The tabulation of erasures showed 448 for judge, 75 for county commissioners, 46 for county controller, 24 for clerk of courts, 112 for council, 11 for city controller and 112 for constable, or a total of 830. In nearly all cases erasures were after the names of independent candidates.

While there is wide divergence between the election board's return and the recount for contested offices, the vote for the uncontested offices was remarkably accurate, and the special board makes mention of the fact that the election board could count the ballots correctly when it so desired.

name of H. R. Lamb, an assistant to the Attorney General.

Mark B. Thompson, Fall attorney, already has been before the grand jury to answer questions about a telephone call traced from him to Dan Jackson, also an assistant to the attorney general. It is understood Thompson admitted asking Jackson, an old friend of his, for information about Lamb. The latter also was trailed by Burns men and there are a half dozen reports on him in the files seized in the government raid on Burns' headquarters.

The district attorney's office promply got in touch with Lamb and summoned him to the courthouse, where the grand jury is sitting.

BURNS' SON TESTIFIES

W. Sherman Burns, son of William J., who also appeared before the grand jury this morning, admitted for the first time that his agency had been engaged to keep the Fall-Sinclair jury under surveillance by H. Mason Day, vice president of the Sinclair Exploration Company. The contract was made on October 19, the day the jury was sworn and it was ascertained they would not be locked up.

"Mr. Day told us that inasmuch as the jury was not to be locked up he wanted them placed under surveillance—for their own protection, naturally," said young Burns. "Day appreciated as well as anybody else the wide interest in the case, the politics involved and the ambitions for a conviction and he felt that the defense had the same right to protect itself as the government.

"Nothing was done in the case by any of our men which was at all improper and most certainly we violated no law."

TILTS END CAMPAIGN IN STATE

By S. I. NEIMAN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—Enlivened by sharp last-minute tilts in the principal cities, Pennsylvania's general election campaigns came to a close today, as hundreds of thousands of voters in all parts of the state prepared to go to the polls tomorrow.

Reports from all sections of the state indicated a heavy vote is in prospect. In Philadelphia alone there was a registration in excess of 500,000, and it was expected that at least 450,000 persons would go to the polls.

In addition to a long list of municipal, borough and county there were 59 judicial positions in 24 counties to be filled. For these political plums an army of hundreds of candidates were in the running, there being 112 persons seeking judgeships alone, many of these with two, three and even four party nominations behind them.

Party lines were sharply drawn in most instances. While there was not the bitterness and strenuous campaigning which marked the recent primaries, observers said there was evidence of sufficient interest to bring out a representative vote tomorrow. Good weather was expected to bring additional thousands out to vote for their favorites.

In Philadelphia the mayoralty campaign held the center of the stage. The bitter campaign between Harry A. Mackey and J. Hampton Moore drew forth sizzling invectives, with charges and counter-charges galore.

In Harrisburg the campaign closed with a broadside of editorial comment by anti-administration forces charging laxity of enforcement and incompetence in municipal government.

RUTH RESTS ON SHIP BRINGING HER HOME

S. S. AQUITANIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Ruth Elder and Capt. George W. Haldeman today had put behind a day of rest, recuperating from their ill-fated flight and the receptions which followed it in Europe.

The call of the bugle for lunch failed to rouse Haldeman as he slept in his darkened cabin, but Ruth walked the deck and was so busy sorting her correspondence that she had to forego a swim she intended to take.

The couple had dinner at the table of Chief Engineer Roberts, and throughout the meal Roberts and Haldeman discussed engineering problems.

Asked about their plans for a flight across the Atlantic to Europe in 1928, Haldeman said: "It's got to be done. We can't be quitters."

"I'd love to go again," Ruth added.

The ship was tossed by a northwest gale all day. Ruth was disappointed that there was no dancing when evening came, but it was pointed out to her that nobody felt like dancing.

The alleged robbers are being held in the South Side Police Station.

The prisoners said they were George Gamster, 32, of 2027 Carey way and Walter Cardell, 22, of 1725 Larkins way. Police are searching for a third man who escaped. Winnoski is in the South Side Hospital suffering a broken nose and lacerations of the face and neck.

BOY BANDIT SHOT BY PAL

An all-night bandit program of a gang of boys ended tragically at dawn today when, in a quarrel over a division of the loot, one of the boys was shot at Bettis Field, McKeesport, government air mail station.

The boys had broken into five places in the McKeesport district, according to police, and had found their way to Bettis Field, where mail planes are kept, when the argument arose. Earlier reports that they had damaged a plane were denied by police.

Mike Vignovitch, 11, of 42 Fairview avenue, McKeesport, the one who was shot, is in the McKeesport Hospital. His companions, Jake Etheridge, 12; his brother, Edward, 8, of 705 Fifth avenue, McKeesport, and Daniel Creighton, 12, of Second street, Dravosburg, are being held in the McKeesport jail. Vignovitch is said to have been shot at Bettis Field during a quarrel. He suffered a wound in the right foot.

A small .22 caliber rifle and some tools comprised the first of the loot. They were taken from a tool shed of the Pittsburgh Railways Company in Richmond avenue, Dravosburg. The Dravosburg school was next entered. Seven doors were chopped from their hinges, desks were broken open and a savings fund of the pupils' stolen. The safe in the school office was badly damaged but not opened. Damage to the school will be about $2,000. At the Buono Monument Company in Dravosburg three typewriters valued at $60 each were wrecked and five tombstones were chipped beyond repair.

Four windows were smashed in the confectionery store of Ellis Whitaker, McClure street, Dravosburg, where the robbers feasted on cakes and candies before wrecking the interior of the store. Two barbecue stands on the road to Bettis Field were entered and at one stand $6 was stolen.

REFUSED SMOKE, SHOOTS

Charged with having fired six shots, one of which wounded Alex Colex, 21, a Negro of Webster avenue, in the Meisel tire store, 600 Bigelow boulevard, Saturday night when he was refused a cigaret, Traffic Patrolman Peter Walsh was ordered suspended from duty on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, and Traffic Inspector Benjamin R. Marshall was instructed to prefer charges of felonious assault against him.

Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh, after receiving a report of the case this morning, ordered the patrolman's suspension and gave the instructions to Inspector Marshall. The patrolman is not related to the superintendent.

Walsh was arraigned before Magistrate George H. England at Central Police Station yesterday, but was detained until this morning when he was held for court. The patrolman, in addition to standing court trial on the felonious assault charge, will be arraigned before the police trial board.

BLIZZARD AND COLD WEATHER HIT FRANKLIN

FRANKLIN, Pa., Nov. 7.—A mild blizzard chased the thermometer down, to 27 degrees and kept most everybody off the streets today. Game Protector Herbert Beatty said it was ideal hunting weather.

BAN VANDAL POPLARS

TELLS WHY

Why Carolina poplar trees should be taboo is explained to little Pearl Hughes of Gearing avenue, Beltzhoover, by her aunt, Mrs. Florence Lowry. This tree sprouted from a root which survived destruction of its trunk.

ROVING ROOTS

This sidewalk and curbstone have been cracked and shoved out of place by the roving roots of a Carolina poplar on the top of the embankment pictured above. Sometimes these roots extend for 100 feet, or more, pushing through foundations, etc., it is pointed out by backers of the move to abolish this variety of shade tree here.

REPAIRS FUTILE

Sidewalks, particularly, are damaged by sturdy roots of the poplar. This old-fashioned brick walk probably has been repaired innumerable times, but years give the roots added strength and they continue their destruction.

MUST GO

Jucunda street, old Knoxville borough, now part of the city, a beautiful street with its stately old Carolina poplars. Other trees with less destructive roots will replace the poplars, however, and property owners will save thousands of dollars.

'TEACHERS' SALARIES SURVEY BOARD NAMED

WILL DECIDE ON FAIRNESS OF PAY RATES

The Citizens' Committee on Teachers' Salaries, appointed to make a survey of the question of remuneration of instructors in the Pittsburgh schools, was announced today by Marcus Aaron, president of the Board of Public Education. The committee, numbering 41 men and two women, will begin its work shortly under the chairmanship of A. W. Robertson, president of the Philadelphia Company.

The committee was named in accordance with action of the Board of Education last June 21. At that time representatives of the teachers contended that the salary schedule adopted in 1920 works an undue hardship on the teachers and no longer compares favorably with salaries paid elsewhere. If relief is granted it must be by act of the Legislature.

"We have sought to enlist the interest of a group of the busiest men and women in Pittsburgh, men and women with a civic conscience, accustomed to deal in large affairs," said Mr. Aaron in announcing the committee. "We sought to enlist the services of a group, every one of whom was well known in and out of Pittsburgh, so that the report of the committee when made would receive the unqualified approval of the teachers, the taxpayers and the Legislature."

Members of the committee are:

HIT BY CAB SON DROVE; SUES

Owners of a taxicab which struck and injured her are liable for damages even though the cab was driven by her son, Mrs. Helen McCarthy, 4418 Sylvan avenue, Hazelwood, alleged today in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the Yellow Taxicab Company. She was struck by a cab driven by her son, Michael, as she crossed Bigelow boulevard in February, 1925.

OFFER TO SHOOT COSTS $50

"I'll shoot anyone you want me to, sweetie," Frank Donahoe, 21, of 2612 Mintwood street, is alleged to have told Lena McClanan, 19, of 224 Forty-third street, when he called to see her. Lena told the police, who arrested Frank charged with carrying concealed weapons. He was fined $50 by Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court today.

Polls Moved Down Hill on Voters' Petitions

Voters in the Seventh District, Second Ward, will not have to take an incline ride to vote tomorrow, as the result of an order handed down by Judge Richard Martin in Quarter Sessions Court today.

The court granted the petition of Patrick J. O'Malley, factional leader, who asked for a return of the polling place from "the heights" to "the flats," charging that the county commissioners, without notice, had moved the polls from 1684 Penn avenue to the top of Seventeenth street incline.

O'Malley produced the voting list to show that a majority of the voters lived near the Penn avenue address.

2 DRIVERS HELD IN AUTO CRASH

Three men were injured last night when two automobiles collided at Forbes and the Boulevard of the Allies. Never Before! Two Shellwhite Eggs With Our Compliments

Two *Shellwhites With Every Butter or Egg Purchase Tuesday, Wednesday & Thursday

We want you to try *Shellwhite Storage Eggs at our expense. It's the most sensational thing ever done in the merchandising of eggs. Two *Shellwhite Storage Eggs will be included free of charge with every package of butter or eggs, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. We are giving 20,000 homes in Pittsburgh an opportunity to sample these unusual eggs . . . the ones that have taken Pittsburgh by storm!

Break one. See how full it is; how large the yolk. Poach it—that's the acid test for any egg. Try to detect a flaw in its flavor. You will find it sweet and mild and enjoy it immensely.

*Shellwhites have four outstanding points of superiority—their size, their flavor, their immaculate white shells and their clean condition.

*Shellwhites carry the approval and recommendation of McCann's. They are superior to most fresh eggs gathered this time of year.

20,000 baby cartons have been provided. When these cartons are exhausted we can't continue the sampling of the eggs. It will take 40,000 eggs (approximately 3,333 dozens), to fill them. This certainly shows how confident we are that *Shellwhites will make friends.

desserts as a part of the cookery program of the school and its principle of freezing will also be explained to the many women who want to know the what and why of the equipment which goes into their kitchens. Various labor-saving devices will be a part of the stage setting, and their practical uses explained by the lecturer.

There will be cookery demonstrations at each day's session as well as a lecture by Mrs. Thurn, with free distribution of the printed recipes.

Mrs. Charles Morris Johnson, of the Congress of Women's Clubs, will introduce Mrs. Thurn at the beginning of the first class tomorrow afternoon. She will tell some of the interesting facts about th lecturer's previous work and experience with clubs and schools throughout the United States. There will be exhibits of new food products and many kinds of household equipment which may be examined after the lecture.

The doors will be opened at 1 o'clock each day and the lecture starts promptly at 2. Mrs. Thurn urged again that the housekeepers plan their week's work so that they can be free to come to the school and so that they will not have to rush away to get their family dinner or shop before the demonstrations are finished.

The lecture and cooking demonstrations are free to everybody who is interested in homemaking. A number of women's clubs and societies, and a number of the women's church organizations are coming in a body tomorrow for the opening. The merchants who co-operated in furnishing the kitchen will be represented by their employes as well as by members of their own households, and women and girls from every part of Pittsburgh will be in attendance at what promises to be the largest event of this kind ever staged in the city.

The program for Tuesday will be filled with interesting dishes and discussions. Come early and bring along some more questions. Mrs. Thurn wants to clear up any doubtful questions on any subjects that you have not yet conquered in your home.

COAST-TO-COAST ROAD

tions encountered on the various routes at different seasons.

With this in mind, Wolff said there was no doubt that the proposed Federal highway would stimulate transcontinental travel with its attendant benefits.

"It is an excellent idea," he said. "I am decidedly favorable to any plan that would lead to the improvement of a through highway from coast to coast. I would not like to see the present Federal aid system of highway construction done away with, however, lest it result in inequitable distribution of Federal funds for road building purposes. To spend a large amount of government money on a transcontinental road might be considered by some persons as hardly fair, say to a state like Michigan, through which it is hardly conceivable that such a highway would pass. That objection might be overcome, however, by having the government build feeders to the main highway and thus reach into all the states.

SHY AT USING DIRT ROADS

"There is scarcely any doubt that a good many persons who would like to go to California, Oregon or Washington by automobile are deterred by the fact that on every route there are long stretches without hard surface. Ten years ago, after a coast-to-coast trip, an automobile was a wreck. That is no longer true; many persons get through with no other trouble than the changing of a tire. But innumerable motorists continue to be timid about leaving the pavement; they fear they may encounter wet weather and get stuck in mud, or run into rough stretches and be unpleasantly jolted themselves and have their machines damaged.

"We run across instances of this reluctance to motor on unpaved roads. For example, inquirers concerning the route from Pittsburgh to Buffalo will be told that they can save 10 or 12 miles by taking the road from Titusville to Union City. It is unpaved, but at certain seasons presents no hazards; moreover it is more attractive scenically than the other route. Nevertheless, not a few tourists will demur against riding on clay; they demand hard surface, and prefer to take the paved route by way of Erie, even though it is longer and less inviting in other respects.

"How important a factor the automobile has become in transcontinental travel can be judged from our records of inquiries made by persons passing through Pittsburgh on the trip or leaving for the Pacific coast from here. Since March 1 of this year we have been called upon to furnish advice to 2,302 persons making the coast-to-coast jorney by motor—118 in March, 230 in April, 216 in May, 307 in June, 402 in July, 416 in August and 172 in October. There is no way of telling how many other transcontinental auto travelers went through, of whom we did not hear.

BENEFIT TO BUSINESS

"The figures make it possible to speculate on the volume that Atlantic-to-Pacific traffic would attain if the government were to build a good, direct, paved road.

"Business would benefit, for tourists spend considerable money in the towns through which they pass, not only for gasoline, meals and lodging, but for clothes and toilet articles and many other things. This was proved by a hotelkeeper in Lancaster, Pa., who made an arrangement by which auto travelers who stopped at his house had purchases made in Lancaster charged and paid along with the hotel bill.

"The transcontinental highway would promote education. There is no better way to get acquainted with the country than to drive across it in an automobile. It can be seen to much better advantage than from a railroad train.

"The road should at no point be less than 18 feet wide. That is the minimum width at which a passenger car can safely pass trucks of the size now encountered."

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 7.—Tia Juana, or Aunt Jane as it would be in English, Mexican resort town in Baja, California, is to retain its name. Recently it was granted credentials as a city under the name of Zaragoza, but such confusion arose that President Calles submitted a measure to the National Congress allowing it to retain its original name.

SUBMITS M'GOVERN PROOF

ern knows, beyond any question of doubt, that I am not and never have been connected in any way with the Pennsylvania Underwriters' Association, that he has seen and listened to and fully investigated absolute and complete proof of my statement, and that he uttered this last lie in the full knowledge that it was a lie when he said it."

J. Lloyd Euwer, president of the insurance company, said: "Mr. Armstrong has never been connected with our company and Mr. Leslie has not been connected with it since 1925."

In his answer yesterday to the charge which was made by Leslie in a speech Saturday, McGovern denied getting $15 a day from the State while receiving pay from the county, but admitted that he had been employed to investigate the Carnegie Trust Company failure and the Pennsylvania Underwriters' Association, and charged that both Armstrong and Leslie are interested in the latter company which, he said, received from the county 42 per cent of all contract bonds and 42 per cent of all insurance. Mentioning the bank case, he said: "The politician who uttered this statement profited to the extent of $250,000 by the looting of this institution, which profit contributed largely to the bank's failure."

While this verbal war continued, the various candidates and their campaign managers issued statements of which the keynote was optimism.

Only one statement contained definite figures. That was issued by Councilman James F. Malone, Republican campaign manager, who said that Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock will lead their nearest opponent by at least 75,000 votes and that others on the ticket will have majorities ranging from 125,000 to 155,000.

Characterizing the drive that has been waged against the Republican ticket as "a campaign of slander" composed of "baseless charges and sensational misrepresentations" made by men who bolted the party in the hope of getting the minority place from the Democrats, Malone said, "Our last word to the voter is the same as our first—vote the straight Republican ticket."

Controller C. C. McGovern in his final statement referred to the present board of county commissioners as "a profit sharing group of gangsters."

"Every report to reach me gives assurance that the results of tomorrow's election will mean the overthrow of the gang power now reigning over county affairs," said McGovern. "The audit of the affairs of Allegheny county for which I have striven for months, to be balked at every turn where the gang could erect a barrier, will be made."

Terming the Independent Party "a mere subterfuge" and saying that the Democratic Party "offers the only formidable opposition to the Republican Party in the present situation," Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence predicted the reelection of Commissioner James Houlahen in his pre-election statement. "Obviously the little group backing this bolt from the Republican primaries are inspired by the sole purpose of trying to win the minority place now held by James Houlahen and in this they will not succeed."

FACTS

Taxpayers of Allegheny County

McGovern's bluff of "quizzing" our members and investigators is over. After three days' stalling he has quit, without asking one single question of our three investigators. His complete lay-down is absolute proof that our Facts are 100% correct.

He will claim that ours is a Republican "machine" move. It is not. We are united only in opposition to McGovern on the ground that he is incompetent and unfit.

Popular opinion agrees that Armstrong and Babcock are sure of election. That leaves three candidates exclusive of McGovern for the third Commissionership. The Facts prove that any one of these three is vastly more competent and fit than McGovern.

Our only purpose was to lay these Facts before you. We welcomed the opportunity to have our proof tested. McGovern was afraid to try it and has proven our facts for us by abandoning the "quiz." Some of the principal FACTS are here summarized:

McGOVERN SAYS:	The Facts Are
There have been no meetings of the Sinking Fund Commission for 8 years.	19 meetings have been held in 1926-27. The minutes of 3 meetings are signed by McGovern, who is Secretary of the Commission.
The Commissioners have blocked an independent audit. They requested postponement of a lawsuit brought by me for an addition of 12 men to my present force of 22 men costing $71,670.18	Appropriation by the Commissioners for an independent audit is unlawful. Application must be made to the Court, which he has never asked for during 11 months. The postponement on this suit for increase was not requested by the Commissioners. The Commissioners have always welcomed a lawful audit, made from a non-political standpoint.
The extras on County work are 30% above contractor's bid.	The extras are 1.7%.
The engineering costs of the County far exceed 10%.	The engineering costs were 6.2%.
I will not agree to a debt statement submitted to me by the Commissioners because I have not audited the figures used.	The figures submitted are prepared according to a method accepted by the most competent and largest banks and investors. This refusal is blocking needed improvements.
The improvements contained in the Peoples Bond Issue will not be completed by 60% because the money is not in hand.	84.8% of these improvements are either completed or under construction. Under the law the money must be in hand before contracts can be let. It is in hand.

FORMALLY OPEN G. M. C. TRUCK BRANCH

Said to be one of the largest commercial structures in the country, the new branch of the General Motors Truck Company, 2701-35 Liberty avenue, opened today. It ranks with the biggest and most modernly equipped truck distributing institutions in the country.

The building, a block square, was erected at a cost of $400,000.

The company is staging for the entire week the most comprehensive exhibit of commercial transportation ever attempted by General Motors. It is virtually a miniature national show, comprising as it does virtually every type of equipment in which truck users would be interested.

MANY DEALERS ATTEND

Dealers from all over Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia and parts of Maryland and Ohio were here today to attend the meeting of General Motors truck dealers, which is scheduled for tonight. A number of factory executives, including V. G. Phillips, general sales manager; Paul J. Feely, special representative; H. T. Kessler, director of branches; J. Hartley Phillips, manager of national sales; O. M. Brede, director of service, and C. M. Eason, sales manager, are here to participate in the opening.

W. M. Kelley, manager of the branch, was a busy host greeting members of the trade, dealers, truck operators and others who came to inspect the branch and its equipment. They were shown the many special machines and tools designed for speeding up and increasing the efficiency of the service department.

"Not only does this new branch express in concrete form the faith of General Motors in the future of Pittsburgh," said Kelley, "but it shows the definite strides which the city has been making in the commercial transportation field. Because of its hills, Pittsburgh used to be considered a city apart from the rest of the country, in that it was peculiarly unadapted to the use of trucks. Comparative recent records have proved otherwise. Consequently, Pittsburgh has leaped to the fore as one of the major truck distributing centers of the country.

"In our own case, this new plant was prompted by the public's acceptance of the light and fast duty models which General Motors added to its heavy duty line. Pittsburgh stands well up in the list of territory which has shown a decided preference for the new and complete line and the volume of business out of this section forced the erection of the new plant.

"The opening of this building is just one step in the program of expansion now being consummated by the General Motors Truck Company. While we have always operated branches in most of the important distributing centers throughout the United States, many of them proved inadequate to handle the increased volume. So a number of the major cities, like Pittsburgh, are being provided with larger and more modern structures.

"In addition, we are now completing at Pontiac, Mich., a plant which will be the largest in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture of commercial vehicles. It will supplement an already huge investment in production facilities there, but it will center such work in Pontiac. Plants now operating in Moline and Chicago will be discontinued when the new factory is finished."

Besides the truck exhibit there is on display the latest models manufactured by the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Company, a subsidiary of General Motors, which includes Yellow coaches and taxicabs.

ECZEMA BROKE OUT IN RASH

Itched and Burned Terribly. Cuticura Heals.

"Eczema broke out in a rash and itched and burned terribly. I scratched it causing eruptions that scaled over and when the scales came off water came from them. It affected my scalp, ears, neck and under my arms. My hair fell out and became lifeless and dry. In the winter it was worse and itched awfully. The trouble lasted three years.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in two weeks I could see an improvement. I kept using them and within two months I was healed." (Signed) Miss Sophie Koker, Worcester, N. Y.

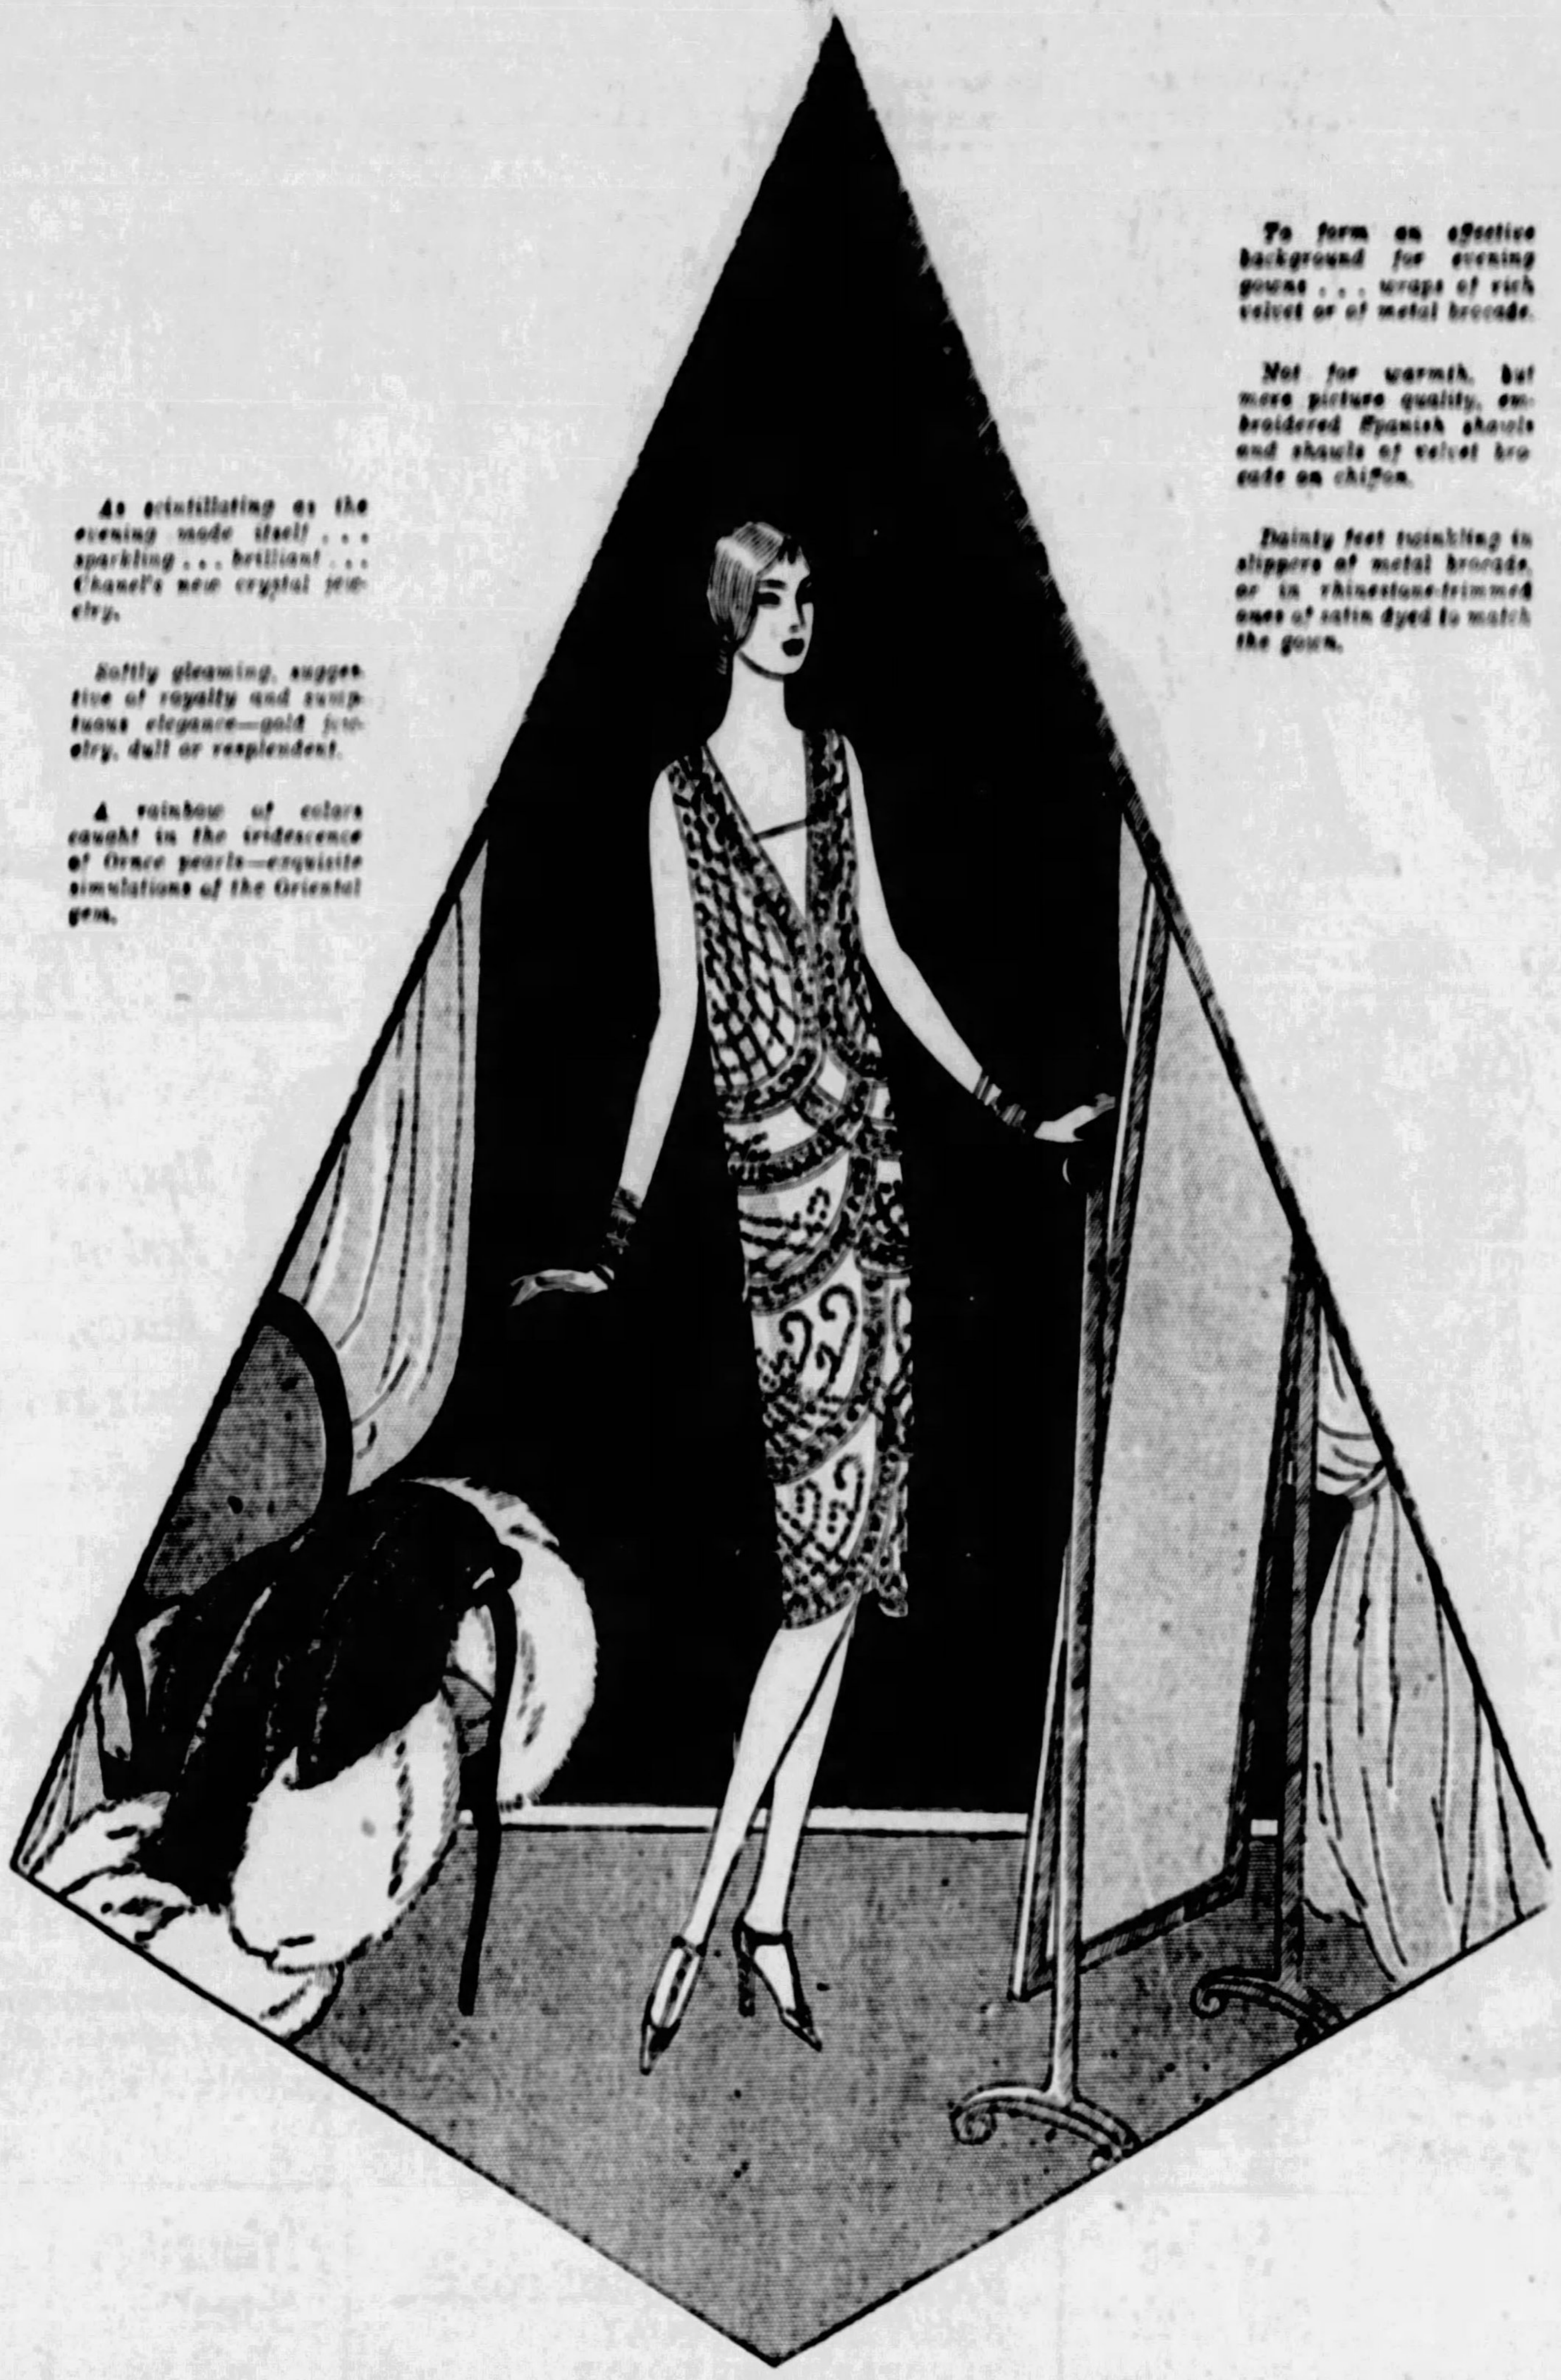
Christmas Cards
This year's selection of greeting cards to be engraved abounds in particularly bright and colorful ones, although there's every kind of card in the assortment. Choose now. Balcony.



As scintillating as the evening mode itself . . . sparkling . . . brilliant . . . Chanel's new crystal jewelry.

Softly gleaming, suggestive of royalty and sumptuous elegance—gold jewelry, dull or resplendent.

A rainbow of colors caught in the iridescence of Ornce pearls—exquisite simulations of the Oriental gem.

To form an effective background for evening gowns . . . wraps of rich velvet or of metal brocade.

Not for warmth, but more picture quality, embroidered Spanish shawls and shawls of velvet brocade on chiffon.

Dainty feet twinkling in slippers of metal brocade, or in rhinestone-trimmed ones of satin dyed to match the gown.

Scintillating Paris Gowns

Arrive to Play a Role in the Year's Brilliant Fifth Season

WHEN the autumn Paris openings so strongly emphasized the importance of beaded evening gowns, our dress buyers, inspired by the approval of the most noted couturieres, selected dazzlingly beautiful gowns in the French capital. They have now arrived to add to the success of the Fifth Season---the Home Social and Winter Resort season---which the elegante is now anticipating.

The restrained brilliance which is eloquent of the best taste, is effected in these gowns by the deft use of rhinestones, crystal, jet and amber; while quiet decorativeness is acquired by milk-white and pastel-tinted beads. There are gowns for both women and misses.

For the debutante, the gleaming white beaded frock, or one of pastel coloring.

For the society matron, the gown of vivid coloring or one of sophisticated white-and-black.

The simply beaded gown for little dances, dinners, the theatre, concerts.

The gown sufficiently elaborate for the season's most brilliant balls.

Style lines which are different, subtle; beaded designs which are original; and the limiting of our selections to but a few of each model—all combine to give exclusiveness to this delightful collection.

Because of direct importation, prices are pleasingly moderate—$39.50, $55.00, $65.00, and up to $95.00.

WILBUR SAYS "JUSTICE" IS BAR TO WAR

TALKS ON PEACE DAY IN LOCAL CHURCH

"Justice is progressively established in individual and international dealings and through this naval limitations will become increasingly possible, Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur said yesterday in the Shady Side Presbyterian Church, where he made the principal Armistice Day address. The Armistice Day service marked the sixtieth anniversary of the church.

"When human intelligence has been so far developed and human institutions so far perfected that there will be no injustice, there will be no more war. War, therefore, depends upon our ability to perceive and the willingness to apply the principles of abstract justice inherent in the creation. When we can be as just as God there will be no more war."

Secretary Wilbur was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, pastor, who referred to him as a distinguished churchman of the Congregational Church. Secretary Wilbur was the guest of William Watson Smith during his stay here. City and county officials occupied reserved pews at the services.

Four other churches held special anniversary services yesterday, the First Primitive Methodist Church, Holmes street, observing its eighth anniversary. The Rev. R. G. Roscamp of New Castle, who founded the congregation 46 years ago, was the principal speaker. The Rev. J. A. Tinker is pastor.

The Rev. C. Carson Bransby observed his sixth anniversary as pastor of the Homewood Presbyterian Church yesterday. He preached two anniversary sermons, the morning topic being "Remember the Sabbath Day," and the evening sermon being "Woman as a Spiritual Force."

The Certain Symptom of Over-Feeding the Baby

DR. COPELAND

BABIES have their sad times just as we do. There come along disagreeable events to disturb their happiness. With their tender tissues and delicate organs it is a wonder they do not suffer more than they actually do.

One of the common disturbances of babyhood is an upset stomach. Vomiting is not at all unusual. Trifling causes may produce it. Even a wrong position of the baby, jiggling it, or annoying it, may cause vomiting.

Of all the causes for vomiting overfeeding is the chief. Crowding the stomach with unnecessary food is likely to bring on the trouble. Overfilling the tender stomach must be regarded as the wrong practice.

The vomiting may occur right after nursing, within a few minutes. Pressure over the stomach or sudden movements of the child may excite it.

Too rapid feeding is another reason for vomiting. In its eagerness to get food from the breast or bottle, it sucks in and swallows a lot of air. This crowds the stomach and helps to disturb it.

You can see that in many cases there is no real disease. The trouble is largely mechanical. But, of course, there are other instances by the million where the stomach tissues are inflamed and, of course, vomiting is to be expected.

Where there is congestion or inflammation of the stomach, the vomited material is not apt to be clear milk. There will be mucus, or blood, or bile in the expelled substance.

In a grown person, a chill may be the first sign of the onset of a fever of some sort. In a child, a convulsion or severe vomiting may be the first symptom.

There are babies who appear to have the vomiting habit. After almost every feeding there may be a return of some or all of the milk. It does not shoot out of the mouth, but simply flows back.

As you would expect, a baby of this sort is sure to suffer. The vomiting deprives it of needed nourishment. It is an unfortunate habit for any youngster to form.

Almost the only thing to do for such infants is to take them off the breast and feed them on thick food. For this purpose, barley flour may be cooked in milk. Gelatin of the right sort is helpful, too.

Usually, vomiting comes from getting tainted food. It is absolutely necessary to get pure milk and prepare it with exact care. The greatest watchfulness is essential to the baby's safety.

In serious and continued vomiting or diarrhoea, to stop all food for a day is good practice. To give nothing but cooled water which has been boiled will help a lot.

Where repeated attacks of vomiting occur, you must talk with your doctor. He will help to find what is wrong. The sort of food, the way the food is prepared and the quantity given are all of vital importance.

The way the child is cared for and handled is another thing to study.

You will find the cause of the vomiting. Then with its removal everything will be all right.

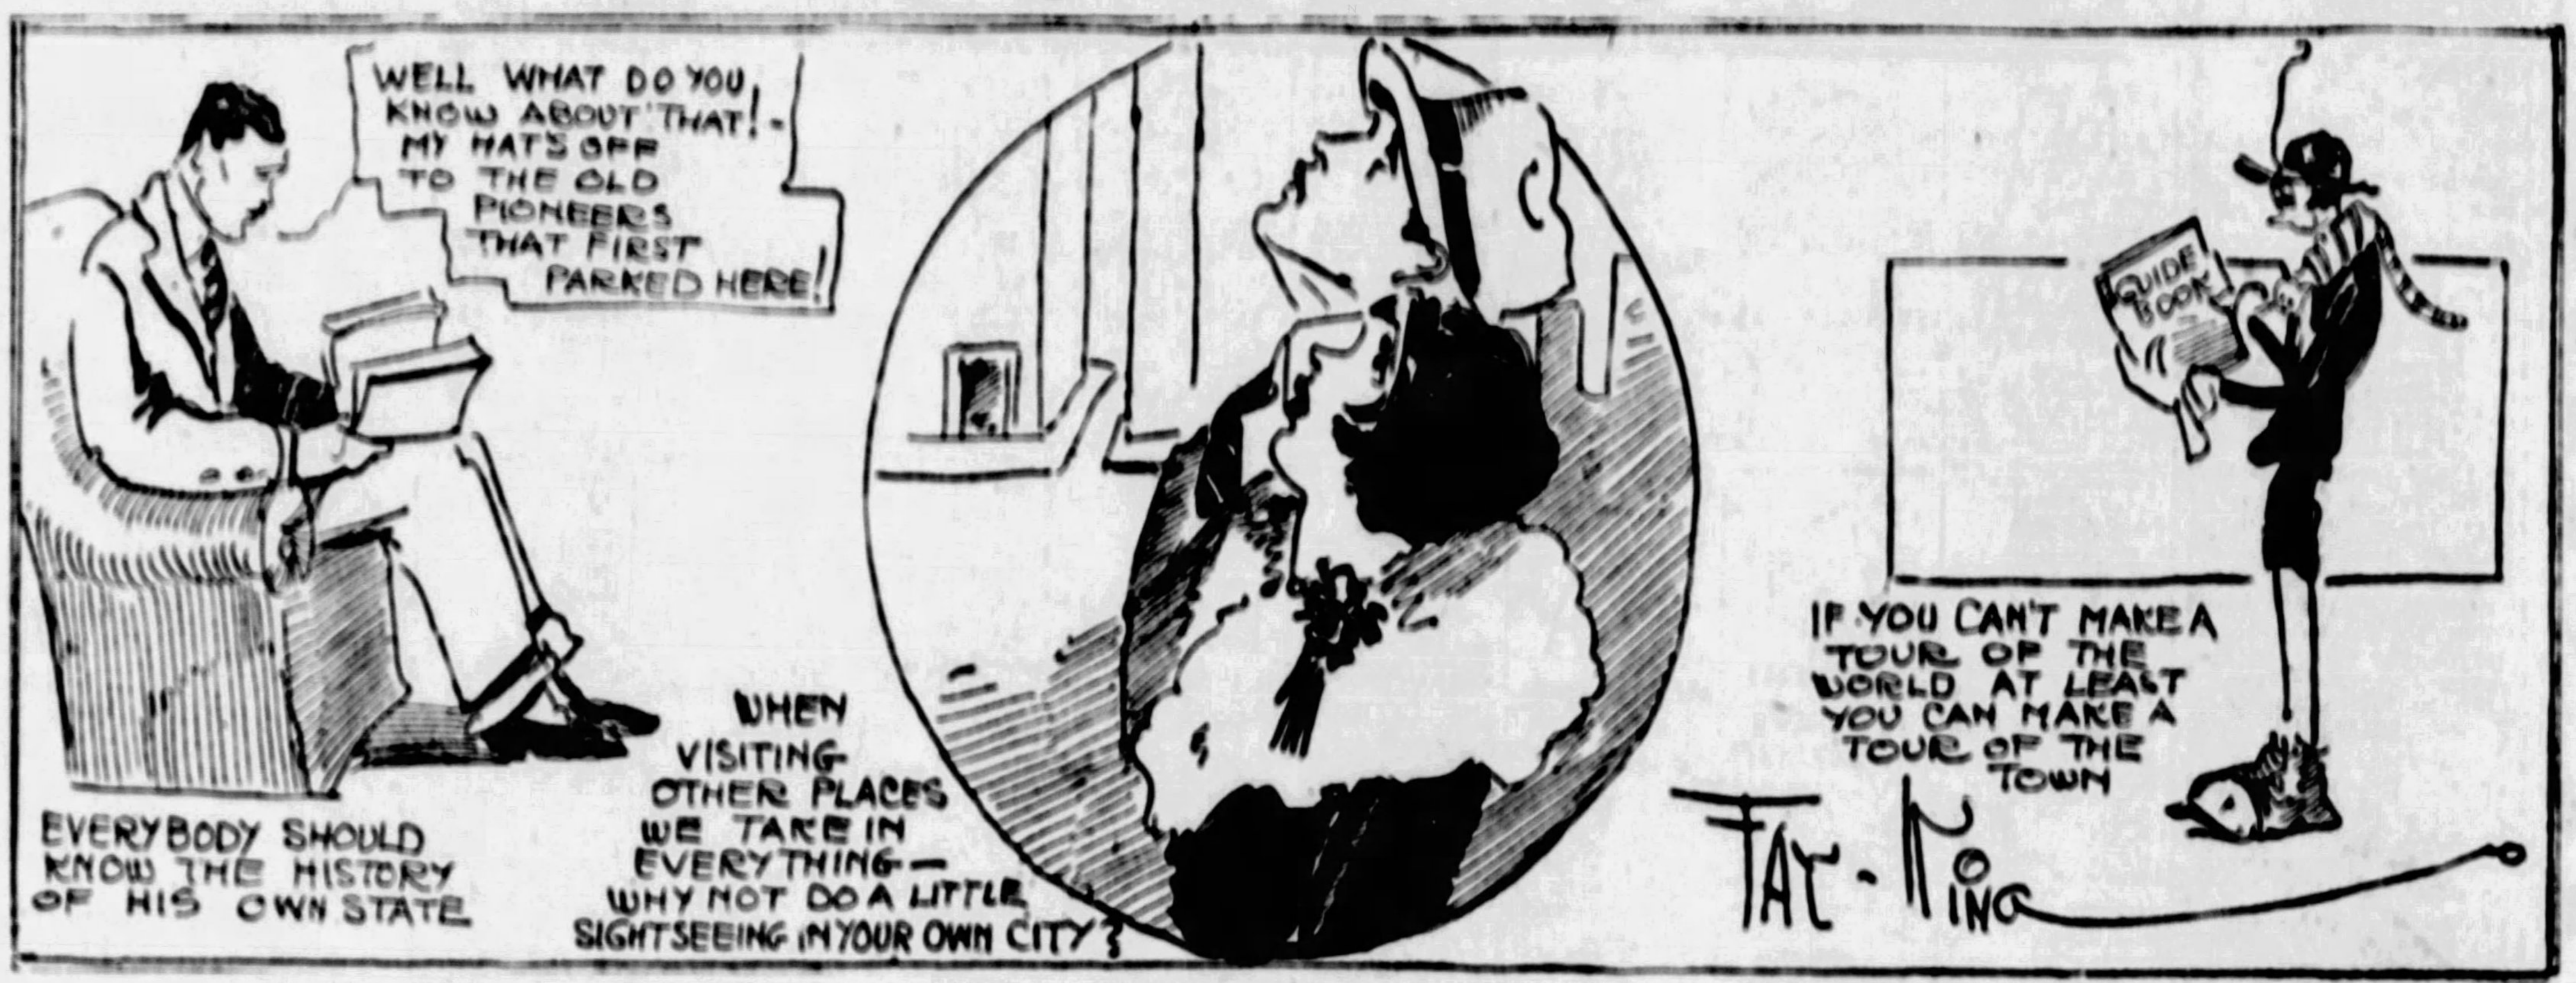
Travel, Says Fay King, if Only in Home Town



WELL WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THAT! - MY HAT'S OFF TO THE OLD PIONEERS THAT FIRST PARKED HERE!
EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW THE HISTORY OF HIS OWN STATE
WHEN VISITING OTHER PLACES WE TAKE IN EVERYTHING— WHY NOT DO A LITTLE SIGHTSEEING IN YOUR OWN CITY?
GUIDE BOOK
IF YOU CAN'T MAKE A TOUR OF THE WORLD AT LEAST YOU CAN MAKE A TOUR OF THE TOWN
FAY-KING

By FAY KING.

THIS is an age of travel.

We no longer look with an expression of awe at the man in the West who has been all the way to New York. Or at the man in New York who has been all the way to California.

The automobile has made it possible for whole families to pile in with the household pets and go sailing forth into the lands and cities they have read about and longed to see!

On Broadway one sees cars with license tags from Seattle and San Diego. In Los Angeles and San Francisco one sees cars with tags from Maine and Massachusetts.

Some like the new places better and others like the old home State best after seeing the others.

But travel is a fine part of life and everyone should tarvel, if only around their own home town.

They should acquaint themselves with its history, and the meaning of its monuments and names, for in case any one of these travelers should ask you about your city and state how stupid for you not to know.

Besides, every place has its interesting history. We think strange places are more interesting than home places, because we inquire about things. At home we may pass a monument in the park for years and never know exactly why it is there.

In strange cities we look at the tops of buildings; we study the views; we visit all sections of the city. At home, we are apt to live in a little rut and never see even the things we pass on our way daily to work.

And how much more interesting a trip next Summer across the country will be if this Winter you take the time to read a good history of the United States.

Learn something of what the first pathfinders endured so that you now can ride the great highways in safety and comfort.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Tuesday, November 8

UNUSUAL activities will mark this as an eventful and memorable day. The unheralded and unforeseen will materialize, probably bringing a radical change of environment, interests and possibly associates.

This whirlwind condition may find expression in the purely personal relation, which may assume a sensational or unconventional complexion.

But be not over hasty or self-indulgent. Keep under control in the excitement.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of the sudden, abrupt and unplanned. This may cause upheavals of a radical and far-reaching nature, but the beneficial and happy aspects of the situation should not be jeopardized by too great haste, quarrels or rash deeds.

A child born on this day should be original, ingenious and skillful in many directions, but its aggressiveness and headstrong nature may tend to bring some defeats. It may have a spectacular career.

Notable Nativity: Andrew D. White, first president of Cornell University.

Use for Mutton Dripping

If a few drops of vinegar and olive oil are beaten up with mutton dripping it can be used for baking purposes just as well as beef dripping.

The Household Pest

Little round holes in furniture, caused by what are commonly called wood worms, but which are really wood beetles, can be cured by the injection, by means of a long-haired brush or a fountain pen filler, of a solution of mercuric chloride. Rubber gloves should be used for the operation, as the solution is highly poisonous. It should be mixed by the chemist and poured away after use. When the solution is dry round the holes fill them up with a little beeswax and polish over with a little ordinary furniture polish. No more holes will appear.

Spoiled Film Parties, Star's Mother Held

BRANDS MOTHER INSANE

VIRGINIA LEE CORBIN

By International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—Because she "spoiled" her daughter's parties and "gambled" away her screen earnings, the mother of Virginia Lee Corbin, 17-year-old film star, today was held in the psychopathic ward of the County Hospital on an insanity warrant signed and sworn to by her actress-daughter.

Making bitter accusations, the blonde actress appeared at police headquarters last night and signed the insanity complaint against her mother a few hours after Mrs. L. A. Corbin, 45, admittedly had swallowed "enough poison to kill 10 men," following a dramatic quarrel with her young daughter.

The young actress calmly told detectives that she had walked "out of the house, slamming the door in her face," when the mother had demanded that she "be her age and stay at home as she should."

"Mother was continually complaining of the boys and girls who came to see me and she never would let me go to their homes," the daughter declared resentfully.

"If I did go to a party, my evening was sure to be spoiled by having to answer the telephone every few minutes. It was always mother telling me to come home."

They came to words, the daughter said, after every party, and continually wrangled over money matters.

The latest quarrel between mother and daughter started late Saturday night, the actress said, when she returned home from a party.

"Mother had full control of my earnings," Miss Corbin, who won her screen fame as a child actress, explained. "I've always turned my pay envelope over to her. I earned thousands and thousands of dollars and mother spent it all."

"I have nothing to show for my work, hardly a penny," she complained. "Mother hasn't it either. She does not know how to handle money. She just gambled it away."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Yuletide Season Ignored as Social Set Arranges Early December Dances, Teas and Debuts

THE holiday fortnight is always a period of much entertaining, but early December this year is going to be no laggard in social brilliance. For debuts and dances and teas of much interest in the social set are planned for the opening days of next month.

On the very first day of December Mrs. William D. George of Sewickley will present her daughter Elizabeth Love George to society at a tea she will give in her home. Elizabeth is a Rosemary Hall girl. She is the second daughter the Georges have "brought out" recently for Rebekah, their eldest daughter, was a debutante a season or so ago.

Elizabeth will be one of the aides at the "coming out" tea Mrs. William Terrell Johnson will give this afternoon in her home, Forbes and Murdoch streets, for her daughter Mary Louise.

Speaking of Elizabeth reminds me that there are four Sewickley valley girls, in addition to Elizabeth, who are coming out this year.

On the day following Elizabeth George's tea Mrs. John Hancock Nicholson of Shady avenue will present her daughter Elizabeth. The tea will be given in the Twentieth Century Club instead of in the home.

Among the dinners planned for debutantes will be one the William McKennan Reeds of Fifth avenue will give December 10 in the Pittsburgh Golf Club. And the honor guest will be Juliet Hillman, the debutante daughter of the junior John Hartwell Hillmans of Fifth avenue.

* * *

Mrs. Reed and her eldest daughter Mathilda were in New York over the week-end. Mathilda, I believe, is still in school.

A week from tomorrow night the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Maitland Alexander of the Ridge avenue set will entertain at a dinner in the Allegheny Country Club in honor of Mary Childs, popular debutante daughter of the James H. Childs of Albemarle street.

The annual Christmas sale of the Woman's Industrial Exchange will be held Monday, November 21, from 11 to 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Richard Beatty Mellon. The marquee, which is being built for the wedding of Mrs. Mellon's daughter Sarah on November 16, will be used, I hear, for this sale.

Entertainments for recent brides are almost rivalling the debutante parties this year, so numerous are they. Another date taken for a tea honoring recent brides is Wednesday, November 30, when Mrs. Charles J. Nieman of South Dallas avenue and her daughters, Mrs. Henry K. Holmes of Phillips avenue, and Mrs. William A. Duckham of the Ruskin, will entertain in the Twentieth Century Club. The honor guests will be Mrs. William Archibald Irvin, whom you remember, of course, as Amelia Irene Niemann, daughter of the A. Edward Niemanns of North Negley avenue, and Mrs. Andrew G. Uncapher, who was Mary Jackson of Apollo before her marriage.

Atlantic City is attracting some of the social set. Among those at the shore are the Howard B. Evans and their daughter Laura Evans, who are at the Hotel Traymore. Mrs. Robert S. Campbell and the Samuel Dempsters are also there, I hear.

And the Alex Rex Flinns and Mrs. Dorwin J. Donnelly have been in New York for several days. They stopped at the Barclay.

Mary L. Allen, formerly of Schenley Farms, has come from the East to be the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Frank Moore, of Fifth avenue.

flavor makes the best since 1847

THE proof of the pudding is in the eating. That is an old, old proverb. But it's just as true to-day as it was in 1847, when Burnett's introduced to the women of America those famous flavoring extracts whose use in the best families has since become traditional.

You know, as your grandmother knew, that every drop of Burnett's is Nature's flavor, pure, concentrated. Imitation* extracts, made from cheap substitutes, have no more business in a dessert than questionable eggs. It's a matter of taste.

One bottle of extract looks much like another. It's the contents that count. Imitation flavors never deceive the discriminating taste. For the children's sake, use Burnett's Extracts—they are absolutely pure. And for the grownups' sake, because of their superior flavor, always use Burnett's Flavoring Extracts.

Another Show for Sun-Tele Club

The boys and girls of The Sun-Tele Bird House Club can get ready for another big show,

Last Saturday a week they saw Buster Keaton in "College;" next Saturday morning, in the same theater—the Penn Theater, Sixth and Penn—they will see Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart," in "My Best Girl."

The show will start promptly at 8:45 o'clock next Saturday morning, and the best seats will go to those who arrive first. The theater doors will open at 8 o'clock, according to L. Lanning, manager of the theater, who will postpone the regular opening hour of 10 o'clock just to care for the members of The Sun-Tele Club.

The motion picture show is a new release, and The Sun-Tele boys' and girls' club will see the first showing in this city. It will be on the regular program of the theater next week.

Admission to the theater for the Bird House show will be by membership card only. No adults will be allowed. Those who saw the last show and met Trudy Ederle know the fun—be on hand early.

FRANKLIN YOUTH HELD IN AUTOMOBILE DEATH

PEOPLE VS. MACHINE IS ISSUE, BARR SAYS

"There is only one issue before the taxpayers of this county on Tuesday," said Senator Barr, McGovern-Shields campaign manager, in a statement last night. "That is, the people versus the machines of Allegheny County. The Independent Party was brought into existence not to make attacks upon individuals. It was created to give the people a chance to wipe out forever the bad, vicious political system that has encouraged ballot box stuffing, election cheaters and those who are striking at the very foundation of government. The independent campaign is a campaign against machine politics and machine politicians who have used the public's money to promote their own private interests."

Picture of South Seas With Native Cast Will Be Made by "Nanook of North" Director

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.

"WHITE Shadows of the South Sea" is not to be marred by any clumsy theatrical efforts, Irving Thalberg expressed his belief that this novel should be produced as faithfully as possible, and in order to do that he feels it is necessary to assemble a native cast.

With the exception of Lars Hansen and possibly a leading lady, who will accompany Robert Flaherty and W. C. Van Dyke to the tropical country, "White Shadows of the South Seas" will have native actors. Mr. Flaherty demonstrated that this can be done effectively when he made "Nanook of the North." There was a picture that made hard-boiled critics bow low.

Mr. Thalberg explained to me at some length that the story is to be one of their (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's) de luxe specials for 1928.

Alexander Corda, husband of the beauteous Maria and director of "Helen of Troy," has again been chosen to direct Billie Dove. Considering how well he did with Billie in that trashy story of "The Stolen Bride," he ought to give a good account of himself in "The Heart of the Follies Girl." Billie Dove's next. Let's hope this scenario will not be on the Bertha M. Clay order. Billie Dove's stories have all been of this type. She deserves a better break. Her beauty alone won't sustain her popularity unless she has better vehicles.

Ann Howe is her name and it's derived from that delightfully familiar slang expression, "And how!" If you are a radio fan, you've heard of her. If you are not, her name is as mysterious as the girl herself, who has been kept under cover for 18 weeks while she talked over the radio in over 200 cities. She is just back from that tour, where she was sent by her backers, 116 radio stations, who had the idea that the interest in the unknown voice would act as phenomenal exploitation for her first picture. Yes, "And how," or call her Ann Howe, is about to make her debut in a motion picture to be called "In Fan Alley." This title sounds familiar, doesn't it? It was originally written for Colleen Moore, but never produced. Frederick Chapin, in charge of Ann Howe's movie career, is about to start production with her in Hollywood.

Even so confirmed a hermit as John Barrymore has succumbed to Hollywood's mania for buying property and purchased himself a home high in the hills of Beverly. The lovely home of King Vidor and Eleanor Boardman is now owned by Mr. Barrymore, who will move there on or about January 1. The Vidors will not move until after the arrival of the stock, which is due sometime this month. Both Eleanor and King are planning to go abroad next year for a holiday, so it is doubtful if they will make any plans for building until later in the season. They own a lot not far from where Corinne Griffith expects to build her Italian villa. That villa, by the by, is now in the hands of the architects.

This is the day of racing, fighting and football pictures. Anytime a company wants to stir up the 'old boxoffice, it is reasonably safe it can be done with one of these thrillers. Universal, which has had more than its share of racing pictures this past season, now rises to state that "Thoroughbreds" is another of this ilk. Robert F. Hill will handle the megaphone and George Siegmann and Otis Harlan will have important roles. One thing, neither of these two gentlemen will be jockeys.

Lorelei first made a woman's tresses important. Since that time the barber has contributed his share to the bobs of the world. Lois Moran, pink-cheeked child, had long hair tucked up to represent a bob. Then came a part in a Fox picture when she had to part with some of her long thick hair. Dr. Ludwig Berger, director, expected to feature Lois Moran in "If I Marry," his first American picture. When Winfield Sheehan signed Lois in New York he had this picture in mind. Now, the distinguished director, who made "The Waltz Dream," is a little uncertain. Lois has changed. What will happen remains to be seen. Of course, there are always wigs, but the Germans like woman's crowning glory in its natural state.

This little bit of illuminating conversation was heard at the Montmartre during the luncheon hour concerning an actor who is employed now and then. "So-and-So has a new Rolls Royce." "Gee, some rich relative must have died and left him some cash." "No—he has seven years to pay for it and lots can happen in that time." Probably he figures in seven years he will either be a millionaire or a pauper. If the Rolls Royce company is willing to take a chance, he should worry. And movie jobs pay well.

Marion Davies can feel well pleased with the reviews of "Quality Street" in New York. They speak of the beauty of Barrie's play and of the merit of her performance. I, personally, feel, "Quality Street" is the finest picture she has ever made. Marion gets the spirit of the little school teacher and invests in it a wistful, whimsical quality that is delightfully refreshing.

Mirth and Melody On Theater Programs

Jeanne Eagels is appearing in a French comedy called "Her Cardboard Lover," which will be presented in the Pitt this week beginning tonight, with matinees Thursday and Saturday. Miss Eagels portrays a chic Parisienne, who is the center of a comedy of the eternal triangle.

"The Girl from Childs," coming to the Nixon tonight, is a musical comedy with Ann Milburn and Irving Fisher taking the leads. There are fourteen musical pieces featured in the show. There will be the usual matinees.

"My Maryland," the new operetta of the Civil War days, with music by Sigmund Romberg, enters its third week in the Alvin today. John B. Reynolds, manager of the Alvin, says the advance sale for this week has reached the same record proportions of the past two weeks. The next matinee of "My Maryland" will be Wednesday.

Mitty and Tillio, Parisian dancers, are headliners of the Keith vaudeville in the Davis this week. The screen feature is Jack Mulhall in "The Poor Nut."

Vaudeville Lures More Screen Players

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—More screen celebrities are turning to vaudeville.

Charles Ray, now in New York with his wife, will offer a sketch. This is not Ray's first entry into vaudeville, as he did a skit several season's ago.

Eugene O'Brien opened last week in a New Jersey playhouse, prior to going on a tour.

Among others from film circles, scheduled for vaudeville debuts either West or East, are George Walsh, Priscilla Dean and Belle Bennett.

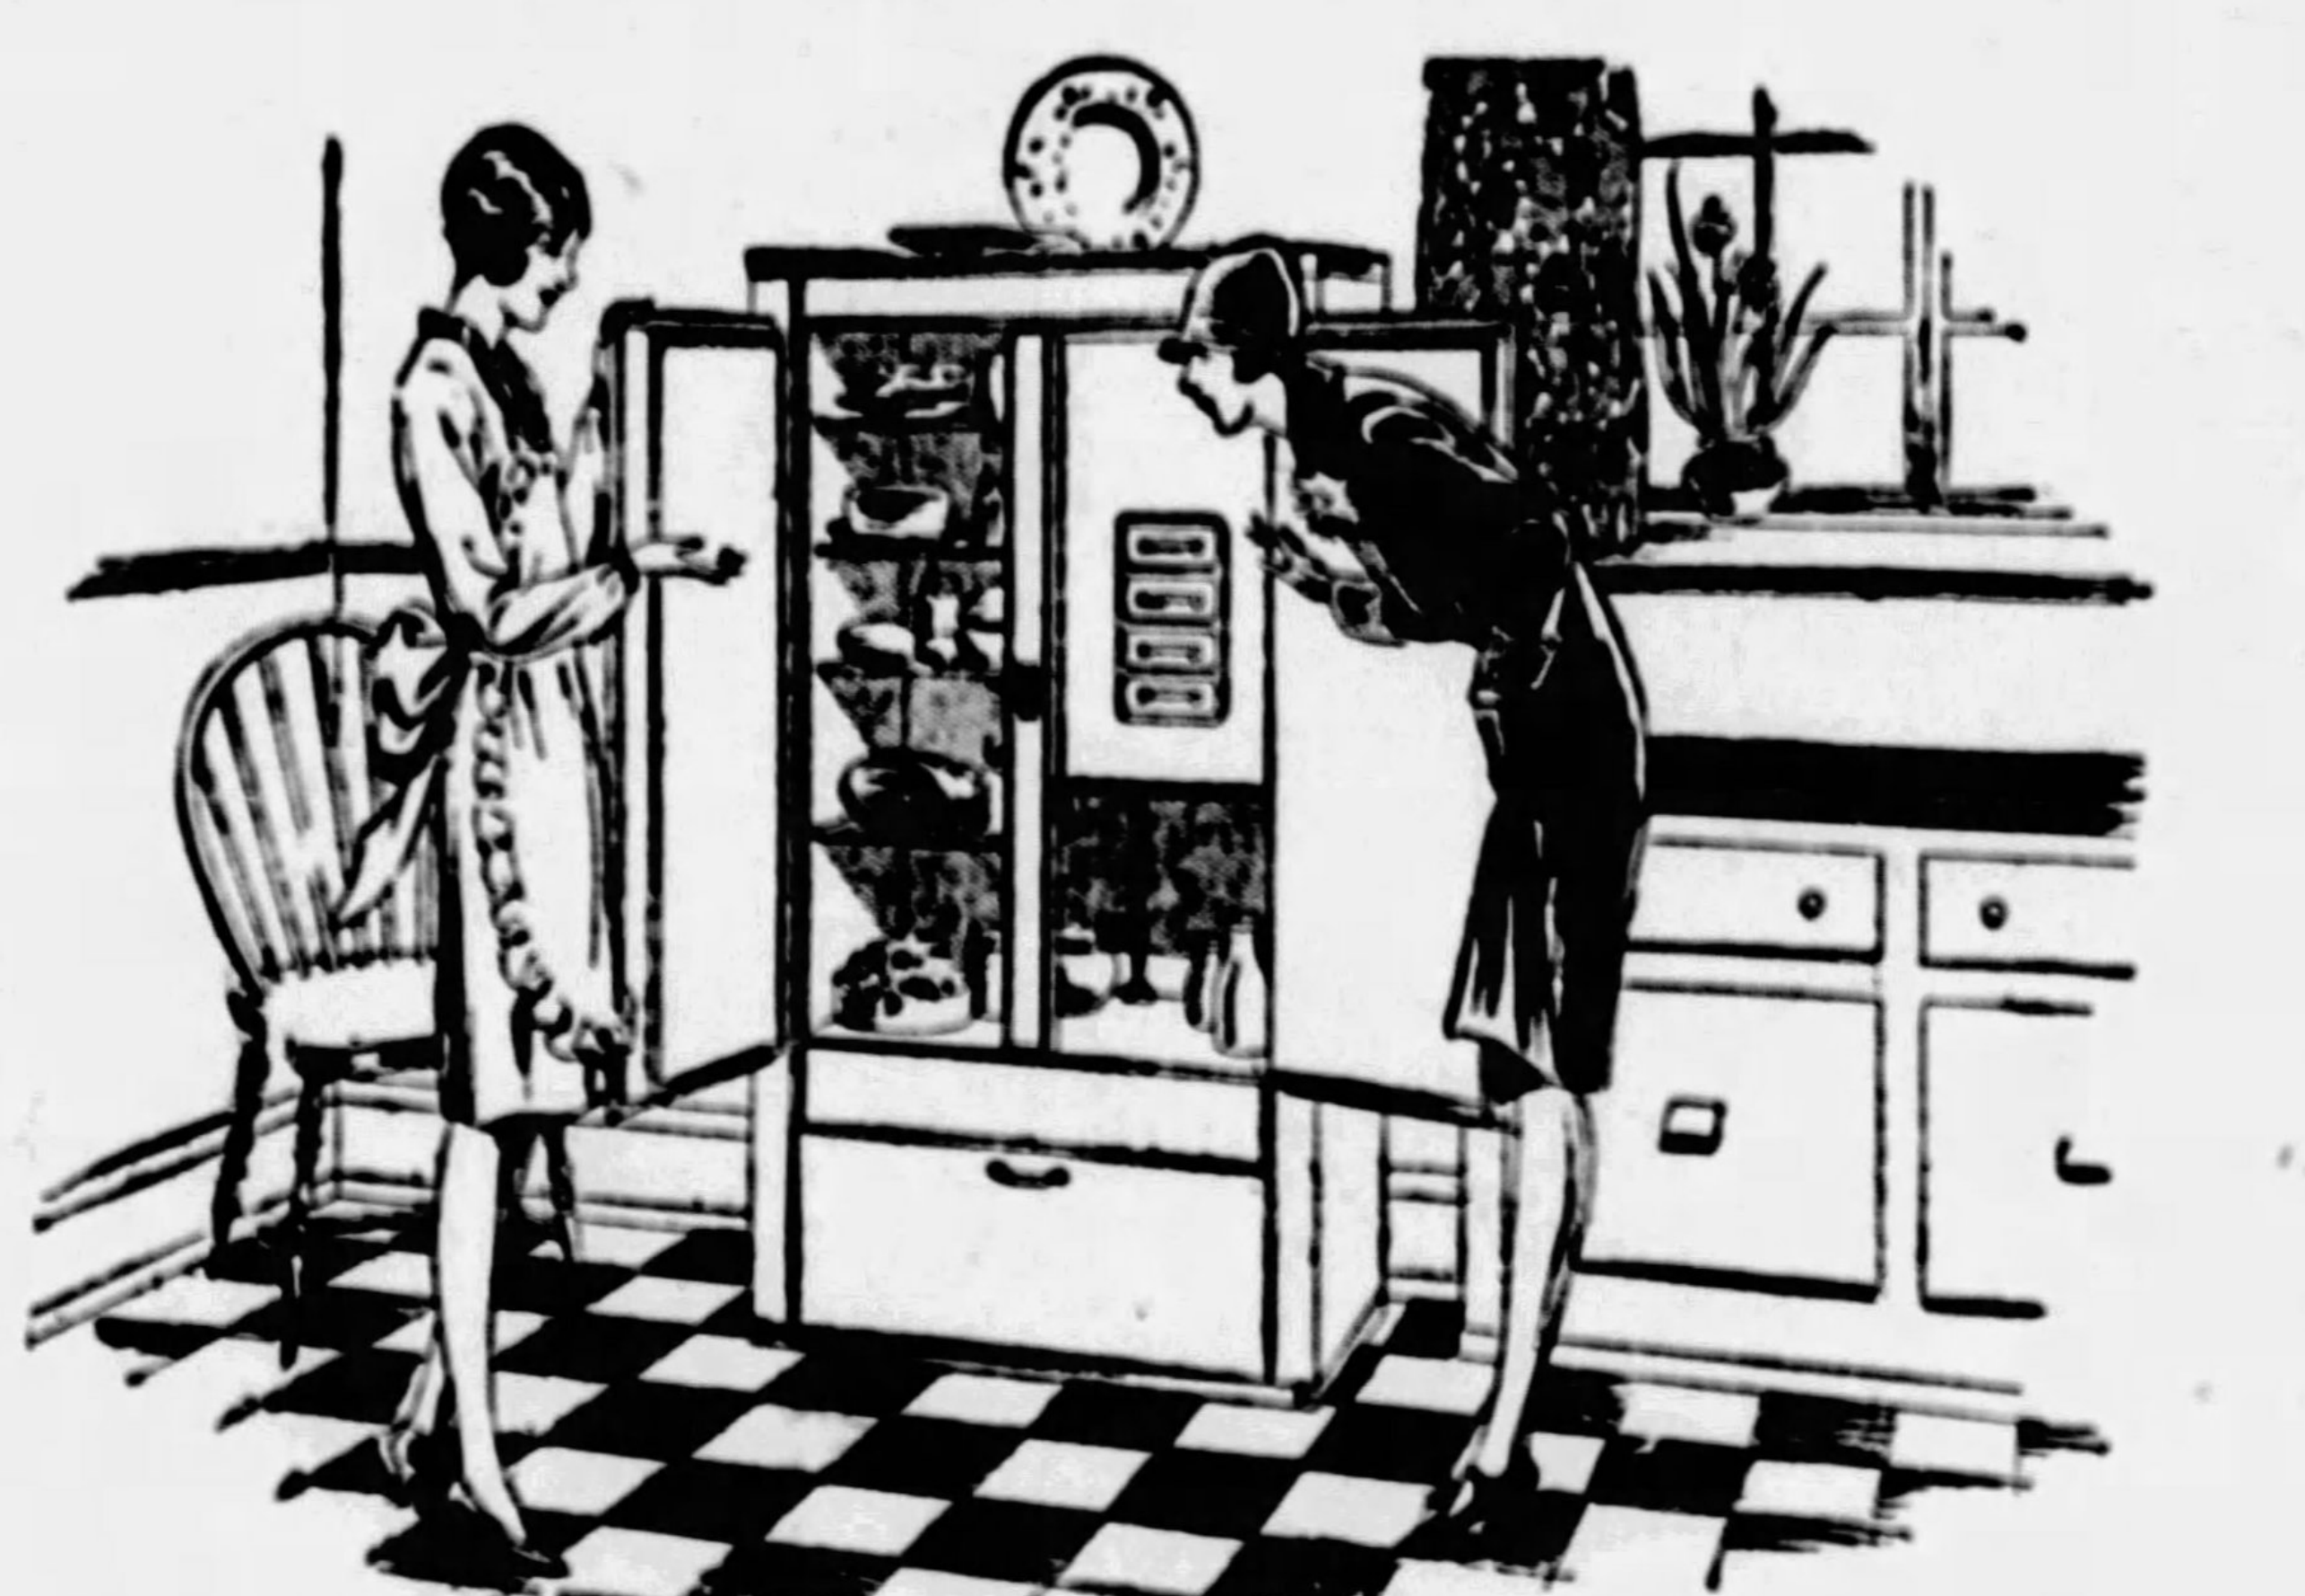
"Tenderloin" New Costello Picture

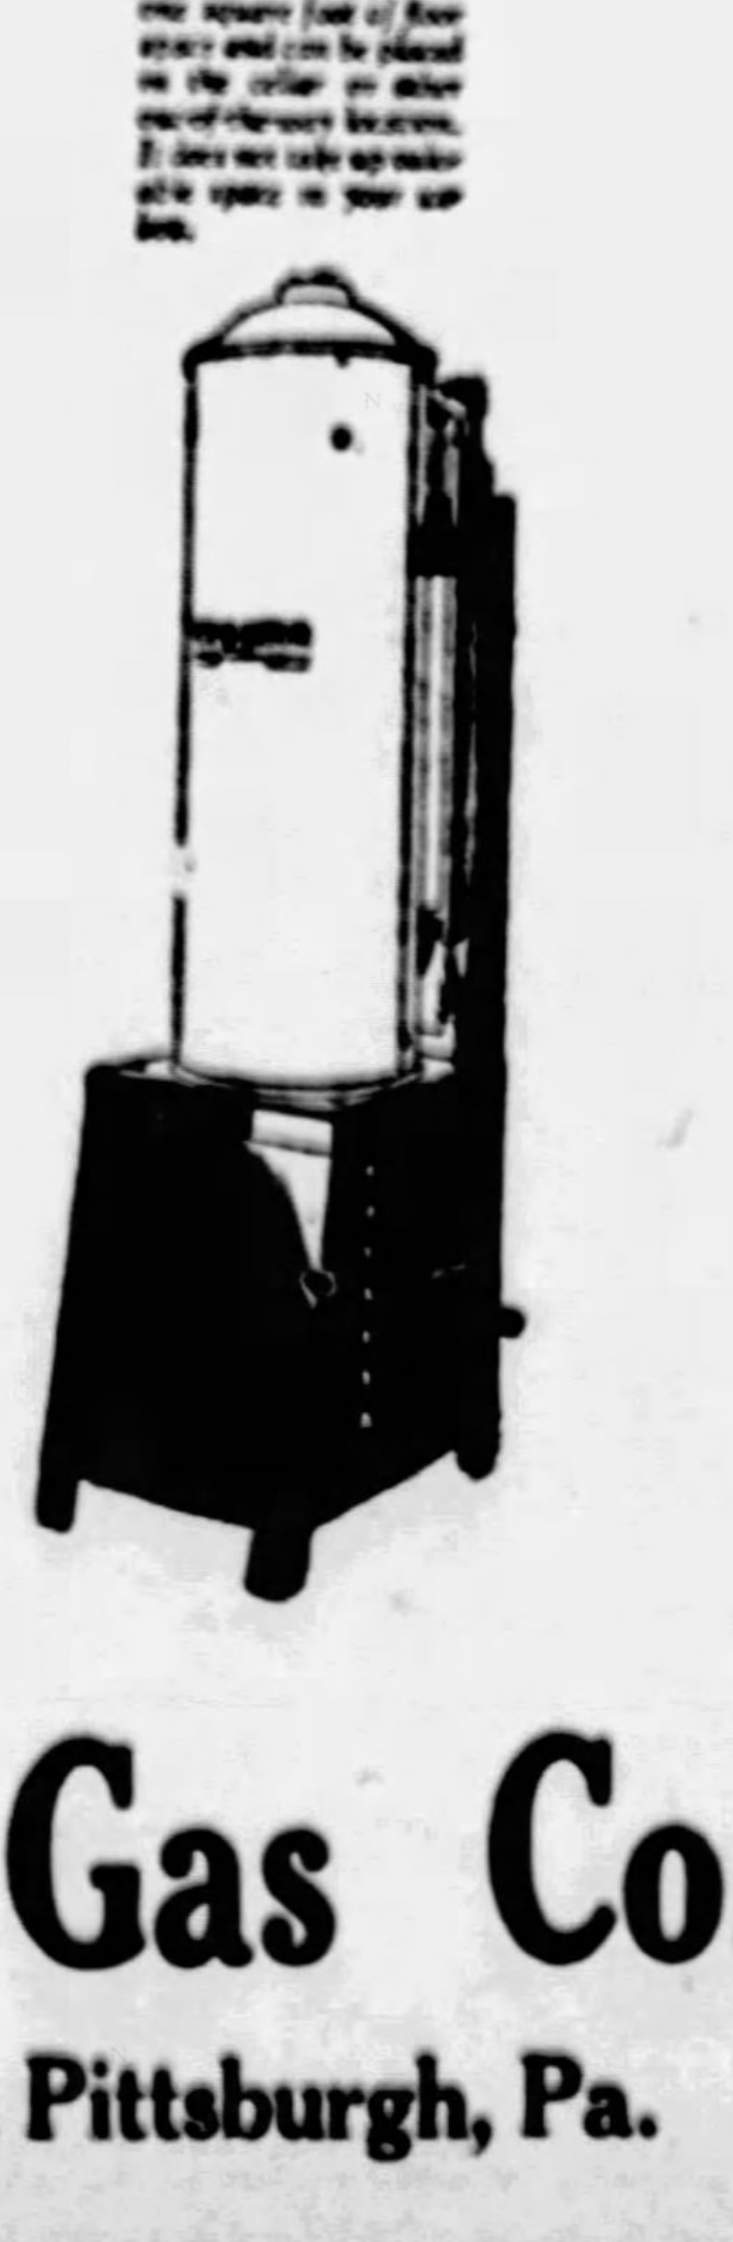
Warner Bros. have announced production plans for "Tenderloin," a story of the underworld, with Dolores Costello as its star. This story, which was written by Darryl Francis Zanuck will furnish Miss Costello with a colorful vehicle totally different from anything she has essayed before, it is said. Work on it will start as soon as she completes "Glorious Betsy," a story of the Napoleonic era, now in the making.

Michael Curtiz has been selected to direct "Tenderloin." This will be the second Dolores Costello picture entrusted to his care. "A Million Bid," also was made by him.

ALEC FRANCIS CAST WITH MAY M'AVOY

Virginia Lee Corbin, Clyde Cook, Alec Francis, Frances Lee and John Miljan will comprise the supporting cast for May McAvoy's next picture, "The Little Snob."





Mrs. Thurn Chooses the ICE-O-LATOR for Sun-Tele Cooking School Work

"Oh yes—It's working, but it really IS absolutely silent!"

"THAT'S one reason why I like my ICE-O-LATOR so much. It's so quiet, never even a hum. Its operation is different, you know, from the usual automatic refrigerator.

"You've no idea how convenient it is. I can always depend on it and even when someone comes in unexpectedly I know I have something good to serve.

"And you'd be surprised how little it really costs. The ICE-O-LATOR operates by gas—the same as we cook with—and gas is so cheap and easy to use."

You, too, can learn the many ICE-O-LATOR advantages by visiting our display room or by attending the SUN-TELE Cooking School sessions. The ICE-O-LATOR is silent, with no vibration. It has none of the usual moving parts to wear out. It is economical because of its low operating cost and longer life. Easy to install in your own refrigerator or complete with a newly designed white, all-porcelain cabinet.

PASTORS URGE PATRIOTISM

Patriotic sermons touching on the World War were preached from the pulpits of scores of churches yesterday in observance of Armistice Day, which is to be celebrated here Friday. Members of the American Legion attended services yesterday morning in the Central Presbyterian Church, North Side, at which time the Rev. Paul J. Slonaker, pastor, talked on "The Battlefields of France."

"The Memory and Message of Flanders Field" was the subject of the sermon delivered by the Rev. R. N. Jessup in the Shady Avenue Baptist Church yesterday morning. The Rev. Charles W. Fulton preached on "The Armistice Day" yesterday morning in the Eleventh United Presbyterian Church, California avenue.

Learning!

IRVING MESSINGER

Here, folks, is Irving M. Messinger, son of Joseph Messinger, millionaire Chicago restaurant owner. He's out in the kitchen of one of his father's eating places learning the business, he says, from the grounds up. If that refers to coffee or sausage, it is a very, very bad pun, indeed. He works 12 hours a day and draws the same wages as other men doing work similar to his. Photograph shows young Messinger about to sample a little of the soup he made himself.

HEAVY SESSION FACES COURTS

Prospects of being one of the busiest and most important sessions of court ever held here are seen in the November term of Criminal Court, which opens today and will run through this month, December and January. The grand jury, which begins its duties today, has the large number of election law violations to hear in addition to its regular work. The prosecutions of the Citizens' League also will be heard by this jury.

Twelve of the 24 members of the grand jury are women, the largest number of women ever to sit on a grand jury in this county, it is said. District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner said that all of the election cases will be presented to the November grand jury and where indictments are returned the trials will be started during this term.

GUARD AGAINST VOTE FRAUD

Two organizations have made arrangements to guard against frauds at the election tomorrow. One is the Allegheny County Elections Association, of which Grant Curry is president, and Francis S. Guthrie, secretary. The other is the special committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association, headed by A. M. Imbrie. Both issued statements today urging that any violations noticed should be reported to them immediately, with the names of witnesses.

MAN INJURED BY AUTO IN FREDONIA STREET

John Havrowski, 71, of 1541 Chartiers avenue, is in South Side Hospital with a fractured left hip, suffered when run down by the automobile of Walter Reinhardt, 17, of 213 Attica street, at Lorenz avenue and Fredonia street, Saturday night. Reinhardt was charged with reckless driving.

COASTER KILLED AT HOOVER

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7—(INS.)—The first coasting accident in this section this winter resulted fatally today when Sherman Harmon, 14, of Hoover Village, near here, suffered a broken neck, while coasting near his home. The sled hit a stump and young Harmon was thrown on his head, he died a few minutes after the accident.

NEGRO KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS FIREPLUG

Thrown to the street when his automobile struck a fire plug at Center avenue and Wandless early today, Governor Johnson, 28, a Negro, of 711 Montooth street, suffered injuries which caused his death a short time later in the Passavant Hospital. Police say the man had been driving at high speed shortly before the accident. He suffered a fractured skull.

IT NEVER PAYS

A GRIPPING STORY OF MARGIE-WHO TRIED TO TRICK LOVE

By Gilbert Rogers

Margie Discovers Shevlin Has Strange Business; She Meets a Shock

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Margie Marsh comes to New York with a thousand dollars and a wonderful education. She keeps house with four other girls, learns stenography and decides after three years to marry. She fails to find her ideal, and Dan Shevlin, a shrewd man of the world, offers to introduce her into smart society through a Mrs. Brooke, provided Margie will give him some security. This security consists of a note which he dictates and Margie recklessly signs, to the effect that she loves him and will never regret the six months she has spent with him. Mrs. Brooke opens her cottage in Newport, and Margie meets her brother, Mark Trelaw, a cripple. She scores a success with rich Tubby Wells and discovers he is secretly married. This information greatly interests Shevlin. She has met Jerry Evesham, a poor young man, who greatly attracts her. She goes aboard Tubby Wells' yacht in her bathing suit. He makes violent love to her, and she dives off the boat and is rescued by Jerry, who confesses he is mad about her. She realizes she is in love at last. She tries to break with Shevlin, but he persuades her to meet the very rich Adrian Martin. Mark Trelaw warns her against Shevlin. She learns that Adrian Martin knows Jerry and goes to his house to ask him to do what he can to help Jerry along. Jerry calls to see Martin, and Margie hides. Jerry sees her and suspects the worst. As he is getting on a train to leave Newport, Margie rushes after him. Later she leaves the train with Jerry still doubtful. She is very unhappy. Jerry's aunt gives her a lift back to town. Unsuspectingly she gives Shevlin information about Martin which the former seems to regard as very valuable. Margie discovers how Shevlin makes his money and decides to have a show-down with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

JOVIAL, blustering, yet not quite sure of himself, with the sagging jaws, the unsteady hands of the gambler—Margie read him clearly now that she had the clue. How many times he had gained admittance to some frightened woman's house, some man's office, and threatened exposure mercilessly! A blackmailer and a dangerous one, with the unfortunate Mrs. Brooke as his tool. And now herself.

But she could get free. She was going to get free.

"I just wanted to tell you, I'm leaving tomorrow morning. If you'll let me know what my clothes and things have cost you, I'll pay you back as soon as I can."

"Generous little thing, aren't you?" he asked. He seemed amused. He marched to the table, and poured himself another drink of whisky. "Generous—why you'd give the world away, if you had it. . . . But—suppose I should stop you? Suppose I should tell you I wanted to be paid as we originally stipulated?"

Margie laughed. She was angry now, hating him for what he was, hating him most of all for what he had made of Carlotta Brooke.

"Oh, but I should refuse," she said. "You see, I've just found out you're nothing but a blackmailer!"

She had expected him to turn suddenly with a startled face, to pour out a stream of futile denials, to try to bluster his way out of it.

But he did nothing of the sort. In spite of herself she found she admired him for his coolness.

"Oh, have you?" he said genially. "Well, if you don't mind my saying so, you've taken a long time to do it!"

Margie felt at a loss. He had acted so differently, he seemed so unmoved.

"Then you realize you can't stop me," she said weakly.

Shevlin shook his head, as if with sadness.

"And to think I gave you credit for being clever!" he murmured.

Margie jumped to her feet. "I'm not going to waste any time. I just thought I'd tell you. I didn't need to, you know. Anyway, tomorrow I'll be gone."

"Wait!"

She halted at the door, against her impulse to go disdainfully on. But his voice had something besides a command in it, something that made her curious.

"What is it? I don't think there's anything else to say."

"You will presently, sweetheart!"

His sneer cut like a whip. Now she wanted to hurt him, in his complacence and his callousness.

He waved to a chair. "Better sit down. What I'm going to tell you is something you ought to make yourself comfortable for. . . . You won't? Well, have your own way—this time. . . . Remember when we talked things over in New York, and you wrote me a letter, a little letter?"

Margie bit her lip. She remembered only too well those lines she had written at his dictation, lines she had signed and that told anyone who cared to read that she had been everything to Dan Shevlin. A lie, but a lie that would be believed. But—what use was it, really? What harm could he do with it?

"You don't think that letter matters, do you?" she asked scornfully.

"Yes, I do—obstinate of me, isn't it?" He walked across the room, picked a cigaret from the box, and lit it. As he flicked out the match, he said gently: "Nice boy, Jerry Evesham, isn't he?"

A start went through Margie like an electric shock. She involuntarily clenched her hand with a shiver. And she knew her face, her terrified eyes, gave her away. Shevlin laughed softly.

"You may wonder how I know. Well, you see, I always find it convenient to have a servant where I work who keeps his eyes open and reports things. Carlotta is on your side. But I manage to hear everything, as you notice."

"Perhaps you do." Margie's tone was uneven. She was frightened now. "But just because—Mr. Evesham and I—just because—"

Shevlin cut her short. "Don't let's waste time! You can't lie to me. If I should send that letter you wrote to Jerry Evesham, what do you think would happen then?"

"He wouldn't believe it. He'd believe me."

"Yes, he'd believe you, after finding out I staked you to come up and marry a millionaire, and you were willing! He'd believe you the sweet, innocent little flower, I don't think! Listen, you don't know much about men!"

Margie's brain felt numbed. A kind of terror filled her—terror of this man, back perhaps from a successful browbeating of Adrian Martin, and enjoying himself now by tormenting her.

What was he saying? Did he really mean to do that—did he really mean to show Jerry that letter? But she could explain—Jerry would believe her! And yet he hadn't quite believed her the night he had seen her in Adrian Martin's house, and with the letter coming on top of that—!

She was afraid. Her attempt to be calm, defiant—she had given up the pretense.

"Let me go!" she pleaded. "Give me the letter back. I'll pay you what I owe. But let me go—don't make me unhappy!"

He drew in a long breath as if gratefully. "I thought we'd come to an understanding. Well, Margie, I'm going to show you I'm not such a bad fellow. I'll give you a chance to get your letter back and wipe out everything you owe me, too."

"How?"

He moved a little closer to her. "Now you're not going to be a fool, are you?" His voice was lower now, and he was looking at her steadily, so that somehow she felt uncomfortable. "You're not going to be a fool? Listen to me! Come down to New York with me tonight. Let me . . . take care of you . . . for a week. Then—quits!"

She stared at him dumfounded. "Are you—are you mad?"

"Only about you! Why—don't you think I've been watching you, looking at you when you didn't see me—don't you think I meant this all along?"

He took one swift step forward and put his arms about her, crushing her, holding her in a grip she could not escape from.

She tried to cry out, but the sound stuck in her throat. Then she felt his kiss, even as she twisted her head violently away.

All at once he released her, and she stood there, trembling almost sobbing. He blurred before her eyes, but she saw now why he had let her go. He was facing the doorway.

Carlotta Brooke was standing there, with a face that seemed distorted with its own fury.

CHAPTER XXVI.

MARGIE'S nerves were quivering wildly. Her eyes fled from Dan Shevlin's sardonic face to Carlotta at the doorway.

For a moment Carlotta stood there with an unbelieving tragic air. Her hand groped out like the hand of someone who is blind. She tried to speak, but only a little broken murmur came from her lips. Then she swayed, caught herself, swayed again . . . she was on the floor, an inert, crumpled body.

Margie, breathing hard, met Shevlin's glance . . . the memory of Shevlin's kiss still on her mouth.

He had stooped, picked up Carlotta, and carried her to a couch. Her head fell back there lifelessly.

"You've killed her. She's dead," said Margie dully. She felt as if she were in some horrible dream.

"Don't be a fool. She's only fainted." His hand shot out and caught her wrist. She did not draw away, but faced him dangerously, silently.

"See here," he went on swiftly. He was whispering as if he somehow feared to waken the silent figure on the couch. "Think over what I said. I'm going to New York tonight. I'll wait—two or three days, while you're thinking things over. Then I'll ask for an answer. I won't mail that letter till then."

"Don't bother to wait!" said Margie fiercely. "Do you think there's any chance—the slightest chance in the world—that I'd go to you—to you? Why, I'd much rather kill myself—much!"

Shevlin looked unutterably bored. "For God's sake," he murmured, "do you women always have to have scenes? I don't care what you think, feel, want, prefer—or anything else. Why—what harm would it be, anyway? I'll keep my mouth shut—and you can marry this Evesham boy—afterwards. You don't think he's thrown away his chances, do you? Well, why should you, why should you?"

"Oh, you—you—" She could not say the confused things in her mind, the terror and the hate that whirled there. She couldn't hurt Dan Shevlin—her anger couldn't move him. Pity and generosity were dead in him. He was like a monster, a creature born without heart and soul.

He threw a look at Carlotta Brooke, but she had not stirred.

"Think it over," he said casually, "and don't be a fool. Don't hang on to the ideas you've gotten out of books! They were all right a hundred years ago. But today—" He smiled and gestured. "Today you'd better get into the procession. Why the only women who talk about virtue being more important than life are the disappointed ones who never had a chance to lose it!"

He grinned at his own cynicism, and again Margie had an unwilling stir of admiration for him, mixed with her loathing. He was so consistent, he never swerved, and even now with the woman who loved him and had lost everything for him, lying unconscious, he was calm and untouched.

No use answering him at all, no use saying anything. But meanwhile she must do something for Mrs. Brooke since he would not. She went to the bell set in the doorway, then realized the hour of night. No servant would be awake. She'd get some water from the kitchen. She heard a ghostly wind swaying the trees outside. No other sound.

"Where are you going?"

"For some water—for her."

"I'll get it." He went out into the hall. Margie slipped over to the couch, kneeled there, tried to loosen Mrs. Brooke's clothes.

All at once Carlotta's eyelids fluttered. They seemed to be making an independent effort to rouse her from her torpor. Then next the eyes were wide, staring, fixed upon Margie's face with the direct, unwinking scrutiny of a baby.

"What's happened. I—I must have been dreaming. No, I fell."

"It's all right," Margie comforted her. "It's all right—don't think—now."

Shevlin sauntered in. He had a glass and a blue enameled water-carafe in his hands. Into Mrs. Brooke's eyes came memory, altering the fixed look on her face with the swiftness of a shadow. She pushed Margie away, sat up, passed her hand across her forehead as if to clear her brain.

"I saw you— I saw you both!" she said accusingly. "I fainted. I remember now!"

"Mrs. Brooke—Carlotta!" Margie pleaded.

Shevlin stood watching, a cold smile in his eyes, a little pucker in his brows.

Hurt and baffled, Mrs. Brooke's glance traveled from him to Margie. Unexpectedly a sudden fury seemed to possess her.

"Behind my back—you've been making love to him!" she cried now. "Behind my back! Thinking you could make a fool of me! Well, I've found out in time. You're going to get out of here—out of here—do you understand?"

Her voice rose in a scream. Her hands were shaking and her fury was like the unreasoning fury of a maniac.

WRONG PHONE NUMBER BRINGS PISTOL PLAY

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—For five minutes last night a man stood at a telephone in a restaurant and five times to the amusement of on lookers he got the wrong number.

Some watched his efforts smilingly, while others made remarks intended for humor.

Finally, in a rage, the man hung up the receiver, whirled around and whipped out a pistol.

"I'll give you jokers something to laugh at," he shouted.

"If any of you move except to put up your hands, I'll drill you. Back up against the wall."

A dozen lined the wall.

"Down on your knees," he commanded, and the dozen complied.

"Now, how do you like it? Laugh that off."

Keeping them covered with his pistol he backed out of the place. The gun-play was reported to police.

BEAVER STIRRED OVER BRIDGE FIGHT

BEAVER, Pa., Nov. 6.—The location of the Monaca-Rochester Bridge which is to be rebuilt has stirred up one of the warmest political fights in Beaver county.

Two commissioners, Enoch W. S. Engle and James P. Leaf, passed a resolution relocating the bridge 30 feet south of the present site and accepted a free approach on the Rochester side. They are both candidates for re-election.

Engle was defeated at the primaries for the Republican nomination and is now the Independent-Prohibition candidate. Considerable pressure has been brought to bear to have the bridge at another location. The present commissioners say that the permit to erect the bridge expires February 1 next and work must be started before that date. Both boroughs have also agreed to the location.

THOMPSON HERE ON FLOOD MISSION

Mayor William H. Thompson, investigator of history books from Chicago and chairman of the Flood Control Conference; Gov. Len Small of Illinois and scores of state and city officials of the Mississippi Valley, were in Pittsburgh this morning for a few minutes, en route to Washington to present their pleas for government control of future floods.

Six sections of the Flood Control Special came into the city over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and three other sections were transported over the Pennsylvania Railroad lines. Mayor Thompson and Gov. Small were passengers on the first section over the Baltimore and Ohio road.

The Baltimore and Ohio specials arrived at Laughlin Junction about 1 o'clock and each train had a three-minute wait before continuing its journey eastward. The Pennsylvania specials arrived earlier and went on eastward after a brief halt.

Officials of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads declared the group the largest organized movement ever to depart from this city.

In the capital Mayor Thompson will confer with President Coolidge, it is expected, some time tomorrow morning, and the question of Chicago's water meter system may be taken up.

AMERICAN FLIER SETS NEW AIR SPEED RECORD

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—A new world's airplane speed record of 322.6 miles per hour, or 5.37 miles per minute, was established Sunday by Lieut. Alford J. Williams, U. S. N., at Mitchell Field.

This extraordinary speed was attained in his first trial, since its reconstruction, of the plane built for him to fly in the Schneider cup race.

His record displaced a record of 298.8 miles per hour, made only last Saturday over the Schneider cup course at Lido, Venice, by Maj. De Bernardi, who won the cup in 1926. And the Major knocked over the record of 283 miles per hour set only six weeks ago by Lieut. Webster of England, in winning the Schneider cup this year.

The mechanical meteor piloted by Lieut. Williams was built by Curtis and driven by a Packard motor of 1,500 horse power. The great speed at which he flew would take him in one hour, from New York to Pittsburgh, Buffalo or Richmond, Va. He could make Los Angeles in 10 hours.

The machine originally was designed as a seaplane and the best speed Williams made in trials was 275 miles an hour.

MAKE BRIDGE IN ONE PIECE

A steel bridge that is practically a one-piece structure was completed in Turtle Creek Saturday and is attracting interest among railway structural engineers as the first completed all-welded railroad bridge in the world. The bridge consists of smooth continuous beams, joined together by the electric arc welding process which eliminates rivets and bolts. It spans Thompson's Run on the Turtle Creek-Linhart branch of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company's interworks railroad. The bridge, 62 feet long, contains only 20 tons of steel, saving in weight over a riveted bridge of similar size whose weight would have been about 30 tons.

LOVE'S EMBERS

by Adele Garrison

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Red-Beard Suddenly Thrusts Himself Upon Madge

THE hands of my alarm clock warned me that I must not dawdle over my dressing, and I made a hasty toilet, reflecting that I would have ample opportunity to dress more carefully upon the train when we neared the city. The early train going to the city Sunday morning never has many passengers, something which I had counted on when I planned to change my outfit upon the train.

With my toilet completed, I took down my best street gown and coat, which Katie had freshly pressed the evening before, and packing them with much tissue paper in the rather large suitcase I was taking because of the purchases I meant to make for Junior, I breathed a sartorial prayer that they would retain their freshness at the end of the journey, so that my appearance might not offend Philip Veritzen's critical taste.

Leaving the suitcase in the hall where Jim could easily get it, I descended to the kitchen, where Katie was testing the heat of her waffle iron. A nurse taking the temperature of a patient dangerously ill could not have been more intent.

"Your grape fruit juice all ready," she said as I entered. "By time you get dot down I have your ham and eggs and waffles ready."

"Oh, Katie," I protested, "I never can eat so heavy a breakfast," but I might have saved my breath. Katie shares with Mother Graham the belief that anyone starting upon a journey must be well fortified with food. Though I, like all my sister women, am counting calories in these days, when a lath is the ideal feminine figure, there are times when my little maid's solicitude over my diet is so insistent that I am forced to yield to her.

"I nefer heard sooch foolish talk," she said as loftily as if I had been her granddaughter. "Eet bad enuff ven you starve home, but ven you go long journey vot you vant do? Maybe faint ven you get dere? Coom home seeck to Junior? Maybe die?"

I laughed, with the reflection—which I did not dare to voice—that I certainly should be ill if I ate all the viands that Katie was heaping on my plate. But by adroit management, praise of her cooking and the prevaricating plea of a headache, I managed to eat a reasonable breakfast, even if an unusually heavy one for me, and then, with Katie's wildly waving hands and calls of "Safe Ride!" her invariable farewell when any of us leave the farmhouse, Jim whirled me out of the farmyard gate and along the road to the station.

The shortest road from the farm to the station is a lovely tree-bordered one, winding between picturesque farmsteads continually giving unexpected vistas of the meadows, woodland and the distant ocean. It is one of my favorite drives, and I especially love it in the early morning when the dew is pearling everything. As we neared a corner where several roads converged there came to my nostrils that sweetest of all odors, the scent of wild roses mingled with that of the honeysuckle, and, with a sudden overpowering wish, I looked at my wrist watch.

"Won't you have time to get me just one pray of those roses and honeysuckle?" I asked Jim.

He drew the car to the side of the road abruptly, and applied his brakes skilfully.

"We'll make time," he said, and was out of the car with the words, opening his knife as he alighted, and in another minute had cut me a wonderful cluster of the blossoms I coveted.

"Better look out, they're pretty thorny," he said, as he came back. "I cut off the thorns as much as I could, and wrapped the honeysuckle around them, but it's awful hard to get them all off."

"I'll wrap one of my handkerchiefs around them," I said. "How exquisite they are! What's that?" as there came a rustling from behind the bushes where Jim had just picked the flowers.

The answer to my question came dramatically. From the tangle of wild roses and honeysuckle emerged a most incongruous figure—that of the red-bearded and red-haired man whom I had last seen at the Larches, where his appearance had so frightened Eleanor Lincoln.

How One Girl Won

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THIS column, devoted to the romance problems of girls, seeks in a spirit of friendly affection to fulfill two main purposes. First, it strives to consider impartially, sympathetically and logically, girls' problems of love and friendship and give practical advice. Second, it encourages young women to write and tell us just how they solved their own problems of romance, so that we all may rejoice with them and learn through their success.

Example is more potent than theorizing. Learning how one girl won love and happiness and The Man, is sure to inspire other girls to renewed and successful efforts.

Today I shall print Grace's letter with its happy story of love and hope for the future:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"A short time ago I read an article of yours, in which you gave advice to girls who bewailed the fact that the type of man who respects them is also the type that bores them to death.

"Inasmuch as I have been in the same situation I feel that I can, with some authority, concur in your opinion and at the same time give the proof of one who knows.

"Until a year or so ago, I was quite gay and enjoyed good times, which in those days meant for me, drinking, petting, etc. I met a number of very nice, well-educated young men, who were everything one could wish for, socially. But unfortunately, they were not the marrying kind—that is, they were willing to take all they could get. But as for feeling any possibility or obligation in return, that was not part of their plan. To keep their friendship, a girl had to be a 'good sport'—drink, pet and take them as they were.

"While associating with men of this kind, I chanced to become acquainted with a young man whom I soon learned to respect for his character. I appreciated his fine qualities, but termed him a bore. Nevertheless, I permitted him to keep calling on me. It was not long before I realized that one had to know him fully to appreciate him. While perhaps he was not as brilliant or polished as the others, he was, and always would be the type one seeks in a husband—loyal, kind, considerate. My other associates certainly failed miserably by comparison.

"To make a long story short, I gradually lost interest in my other friends and conscientiously set about 'appreciating' this young man whom I had at first found dull. The upshot is, I find him now the dearest of men. And last, but not least, he is the man I am to marry. Since our engagement I am happier and more contented than I ever imagined I could be.

"So you see it does pay to cultivate the type who, while they have the good qualities and virtues, may seem on the surface a little dull and boring. I am so glad I had the sense to appreciate my fiance's worth.

"GRACE."

Of course it pays, Grace dear, to cultivate the friendship of young men you respect and like. With this solid basis for friendship, love is likely to take care of itself on further acquaintance, when a man and girl are really suitable and congenial as friends.

Your experience, Grace, also goes to show how wise it is for a girl to build up a circle of good friends among young men, rather than devote herself exclusively to each new beau. One of those discarded friends might have proved the dearest of all.

In making firends and choosing sweethearts, study character carefully. Do not refuse the friendship of a man because he lacks the fascination of a sheik or the lure of a modern Romeo. Give yourself a chance to learn to care for the man who is worth while. Look beyond entertainment of the instant, choosing firends and encouraging attentions if you hope to build for lasting happiness through successful marriage.

Savory Creamed Oysters

Put a large half cupful of blanched almonds through the chopper, then pound them to a paste in a mortar with a little cream. Have ready a pint of smoothly mashed and seasoned white potato, mix the almonds with it and mound on a hot dish. Surround with creamed oysters, in a stiff rich cream in no way sloppy, dust with a little grated American cheese, then put into a hot oven for a minute or two to delicately brown. Then garnish with sprays of fresh watercress and serve. The oysters should be scalded for two minutes in their own liquor, then drained and added to the cream sauce.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

BUT THEY'RE ALL WE HAVE—TO LOVE

A WOMAN can keep right on loving a man, no matter how often he hurts her heart; but the moment he offends her imagination, he is "out of the picture."

A woman may not be sure that a man has done all the things of which she suspects him; but she is always perfectly sure that he WILL if she'll only give him the chance and the time.

* * *

The average man is constantly turning over a new leaf—so that he can have more room to blot up the pages.

HELEN ROWLAND

The job of private secretary doesn't offer a girl the most liberal salary in the world; but it comes pretty near to affording her the most liberal education.

* * *

Before marriage, a man declares that his dearest wish is to do everything on earth to make you happy; but after marriage, it takes all your strength and energy to FORCE him to grant his own wish.

* * *

To forgive a man for ONE sentimental indiscretion may be policy; to forgive him three times is magnanimity—but to forgive him any oftener, is lunacy!

* * *

Being a platonic friend to a man means merely being the mother-confessor of all his heart affairs and the receptacle of all his marital woes.

Nothing is weaker than a man's faith in a woman's love—for another man.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WHO STOLE THE JOB?

I HAVE an angry letter before me—from a man. About working women. Why can't they "stay home where they belong instead of stealing jobs from needy working men?" That's what ails the world today—women stealing men's jobs, etc., etc.

It is a vehement letter and many people will agree with it. But there is one funny thing about it. The man that wrote that letter is a Baker.

A BAKER!

And it has never occurred to him that the job which he holds and which he would defend against women WAS ORIGINALLY STOLEN FROM WOMEN!

Nor has it ever occurred to him that a vast number of other jobs now held by men were once performed by women. The weaving, dyeing, designing, cutting and making of garments—the washing of clothes—canning—knitting—the making of carpets, soap, candles, simple remedies, rugs—all of these and hundreds of allied tasks were once performed by women.

Until recently as the middle of the last century, homes were manufacturing centers. Women did not have school educations, votes or property rights, but they did have power and standing in the community because of their craftsmanship. Women and homes were extremely important and necessary in those days.

Then one by one, men stole the crafts from the home. The spinning wheel went out—the candle mold, the soap kettle, the cutting table, the mixing bowl, the wash tub—out they all went and in their places came "store goods." Store goods made by men and sold by men.

At first it was considered "slack" to buy store goods. The woman who bought "bakery bread" or cake somehow lost caste with her neighbors. Canned goods—what an extravagance when one could put up things so cheaply at home? But the men won out. And, today it requires just about as much expert craftsmanship to run an apartment home as to chew a wad of gum.

How long should it take the average, healthy young bride to do her housework? Two hours is a liberal estimate. She still consumes all the things her grandmother consumed and requires much more service. BUT MEN MAKE THE THINGS WHICH SHE CONSUMES. MEN RENDER THAT SERVICE.

What's the little bride going to do with her time?

Sit idle? Suppose she's too proud, or too much in love with her husband to graft through life that way? What then?

Think it over.

NO, THE ads for lovely feminine things aren't what so absorb Ritzy Rosey's attention. It's the page given over to the masculine fashions that is intriguing her. It seems so unmasculine to read about snakeskin ties and burgundy-colored hats and silk underthings as part of "What the Well-Dressed Male Should Wear." Wouldn't the college eleven look funny if they turned up for practice in satin knickers and ruffled vests and buckled shoes? Who knows, for Fashion's pendulum sometimes swings far back when deciding the mode!

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Friendly

DEAR MISS GALE:

Although this letter is officially addressed to you, it is mostly to those girls of the same type as myself. I am of that class of girls who, according to all known laws, should be popular with the opposite sex. However, we are not and I for one am not heartbroken about it. Some girls are born to be popular, of whom my sister is one; some are born to seem unpopular, of whom I am one. I say I should be popular because I have pretty, well chosen clothes, I am good looking enough to attract a second and third glance. I am fairly graceful, a fairly good dancer, am quick witted, and I try to make myself naturally agreeable. I am not heartbroken because I find other diversions. I used to feel pretty badly because I wasn't popular with the boys. Now don't get conceited, "gentlemen," because, while you are almost necessary to us, we are of equal necessity to you. That is only natural, since men were made for women and women for men. Each is incomplete without the other. Of course, we look to each other for our good times, as that is according to the first laws of nature. It is also natural that, since there are more women than men in this part of the world some girls are not attractive to men. However, we can be happy without the companionship of men, especially of some of the conceited, undersized, worthless cigaret fiends of these eastern cities. Perhaps they seem worse here because they are more talked and written about. Above all things, don't chase a man who does not want a date. Of course, don't be standoffish and cold. Treat him as a pal. Why not fill your lives with other interests. You'll be surprised to see how quickly good music dissipates the blues. Have girl friends, read stories or anything. If you still find some lack read the Bible, especially the New Testament. You'll be surprised, I promise you. We are more intense than boys, so we need intense things to satisfy us. Dreams are wonderful. A man once told me "Always keep your dreams sweet and clean and they will prove your greatest treasure."

FRIENDLY.

Your letter is one which I am glad to pass on to my correspondents. Peace is something that is always sought and seldom found, and you are most fortunate to have attained it. And, too, you are more than likely to attain some measure of popularity just when you have discovered that it is not everything in life.

H. N. P.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am writing to you in hope that you will suggest a solution to a problem that to me is quite vital. Last October I met a young lady on a blind date. Our acquaintance progressed until it seemed as though our affection was mutual. Then one night my mother and I called upon the young lady and her parents. I had previously become cross at some trivial matter, and when the young lady stated her intention of not speaking to me upon my arrival, I decided to retaliate. However, I went to the extreme of refusing to meet a couple of her friends who passed the house. This caused her to become quite angry, and rightly so. We discussed the matter subsequently, and upon my admission of being wrong, and my apology for my action, she forgave me and we agreed to drop the subject for good. Since that time she has become very unreliable, breaking dates. About three weeks ago I called on her, and when leaving asked permission to call again. She said that I could not see her until the next Sunday or later. When my mother asked her to accompany us to a movie the next evening she consented. I made two joking criticisms of her driving and she became rather cross. Whereupon my temper arose and I became cross, too. I refused to go into the theater because of the crowd, but later returned and went into the same theater. I did not accompany her to her home. Again I will admit I was wrong. Four days ago a friend was at my home and called another girl of the same name. I suggested that he call the young lady, and my mother took up the suggestion and further suggested that he "kid her along." When I took the phone she seemed rather incensed at the trick and accused me of not being enough of a man to call myself. At the end of the conversation relations seemed to be more strained. I desire to continue our friendship, but I don't know what to do. What should we both do next?

H. N. P.

If you really wish the truth, I think the young woman has changed her mind concerning you. Try leaving her alone for a few weeks, and she may find that she really does like you.

Waiting

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have read your answer to many and am coming to you for advice, also to congratulate you on your wonderful advice. I'm a girl just past 16. Everyone takes me for 19 years of age, all on account of my oldish manner and height. Here is my trouble. I have been going with boys with my mother's consent. There is one boy whom I have been going with when he comes home for the holidays and I also go out once in awhile with others. This boy was home a few weeks ago and came down to see me that evening. He had done this every time he came home. Now, we parted friends and he went back. But before I knew he was coming home I wrote to him (for he always sent me one letter a week) and he got home before the letter got there. He has gone back and had promised to write, but I have not heard from him. Miss Gale, there was something in the letter I wrote to him about another fellow coming to see me who had asked me to marry him once before. But this fellow does not come to see me. I just put it in for fun for he did not come back at all. Do you think this would make him sore? That is the only reason I know for his not writing for he always wrote when he went back. Miss Gale, I have waited three and four weeks before I answered his letters and I always received answers inside of four days. He told me that when he waited for my answers he promised himself he would also wait three weeks, but as soon as he got the letter he answered the same evening. Do you think his feelings are other than friendship? His actions sometimes prove that they are. I do not love or care very much for him but like his company. Miss Gale, the question is, shall I write first?

WAITING.

This boy has, of course, no right to object to your having other friends. Wait a little longer, and then send him a short note. If he does not answer that, let the matter drop.

Kid Boots

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have written to you before and think your advice is wonderful. I have a problem: I have been going with a boy for over two and a half years. I think he is the only boy I could really love. Now, Miss Gale, he used to live here in Pittsburgh, but as his parents moved, he had to leave my home town. He had been writing to me for quite a while. But in the letter before the last one he wrote he said for me to get another fellow, but he always wants me to consider him a friend. Now, Miss Gale, do you think he has some one else, and is just throwing me down? I was so angry after he wrote the last letter, and I sent him one and asked him to send my things that belonged to me, which he did. Miss Gale, if a fellow has some pictures of you, is it right to ask him for them if you are not going to go with him any more? Miss Gale, he hasn't answered it. Shall I write another letter. Well, Miss Gale, I thank you very much for your time and space.

KID BOOTS.

Yes, I am afraid you must accept the fact that he is no longer interested in you, my dear. It would be nice if he would return your pictures, but don't make a point of it by writing to him again.

In Doubt

DEAR MISS GALE:

I read your advice daily, and think it wonderful, and now I am coming to you for some of it. I have been going with a young man for a year, he is a very nice chap, and he seems to like me a lot, but I am not so sure that I like him. I get discouraged with him for the least thing, and then again if he would stop coming to see me I am sure I would miss him. Miss Gale, do you think I do, or don't like him? I am asking you to solve a question that is always on my mind. Thanking you in advance.

IN DOUBT.

You are certainly not very much in love with him, my dear, or you wouldn't be so in doubt. You probably like him well enough as a friend, so why worry about it? Accept the situation as it is.

Red Lips

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl of 17. I like a boy who has moved into our neighborhood. He has a brother and a sister, but they are smaller than him. I would like to speak to the girl and get friends with her. They have a car. The two boys pass our house pretty often and they smile at me but do not speak. I smile at them but I'd love to speak to those boys and I would like to have your advice about it. Should I speak first or wait until they speak first.

RED LIPS.

Why not make friends with the sister, my dear, and through her meet the boys?

You never apologized for your silver service that way, of course. Perhaps you've wanted to, though, for silverware will get streaked and spotted. Perhaps hard water has a lot to do with that. When you use hard water, the suds won't come. The grease won't go.

M'KECHNIE SIGNS AS CARD MANAGER

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1927

WHO'S NEXT?

WHAT! IN AGAIN?

Sure he is. The dapper Jack Kearns once again is managing a pugilistic sensation. He is the man behind Mickey Walker, who knocked out Mike McTigue in one round the other night. Mickey is the former welter champ, the present middleweight king and maybe the light-heavy weight champion-to-be.

JACK KEARNS

MICKEY WALKER

Kearns, who first came into prominence by managing Jack Dempsey into the world's heavyweight championship and the millionaires' class, is back in the big money again with a man he wants to match against Dempsey. 'Tis none other than Mickey Walker, who has grown up from a beaten welter-weight champion to the estate of a man who slaps about former light-heavy kings. He meets Paul Berlenbach next.

Kearns, one of the shrewdest of managers, has had Walker as a welter-weight champion and a middleweight ruler. He says there's no limit to the kid's cleverness and he'll go higher.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

TO THOSE who were aware of "inside conditions," the brightest spot in Saturday's brilliantly-waged football game between the Panthers and Presidents was the superlative courage of two of the participants, standing out in the midst of a scoreless contest in which every man who took part—only 12 played on each side—displayed a full share of that most admirable of all sport qualities.

One was Jimmy Hagan, Pitt halfback, entering the game with an arm so severely crippled he could not raise it as high as his shoulder without pain, but playing because, with so many of his backfield mates unable to get in at all, he simply could not be spared.

There was Hagan, punting as beautifully as ever, though the ball was too muddy for his usual placement accuracy; intercepting passes and doing his gallant best to conceal his hurt, while the spectators, not knowing the conditions under which he was playing, wondered why he did not carry the ball oftener.

JACK ZIVIC and Young Saylor answer the gong against each other in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden tonight.

The match has been more than six months in the making and is a hot one for the fans. Saylor has been fighting several years and never has been beaten, while Jack has been mingling with the very best in his class during the same stretch and recently hasn't been winning so often, although he has been putting up great fights. Zivic wants to get back on the winning side and Saylor can't afford to go over to the losing side.

Jack hasn't boxed here since his return bout with Cuddy DeMarco in the same ring last March and the fans will welcome him back. A good gate is in prospect.

Ray Shafer of Garfield boxes Bull Miller, Monessen's veteran middleweight, in the eight-round semi-final, and Stanley Simmons, light-heavyweight of Lawrenceville, is down for a six-rounder with Chuck Semak of McKeesport. O'FARRELL, DEPOSED, GETS PAY BOOST

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Bob O'Farrell has been deposed as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and Bill McKechnie, coach during the 1927 season, has been appointed to manage the team next season, President Sam Breadon announced today.

O'Farrell has signed a player contract for 1928 at a salary increase of $5,000, Breadon said.

"O'Farrell was successful as a manager," Breadon said, "but I have considered the problem carefully and I think the worries of managing the club handicapped him. In 1926, he was the league's most valuable player and the best catcher in baseball.

"In 1927, perhaps because of the managerial responsibilities, he was injured several times and was able to catch only a few games. Had he escaped injuries, I believe we would have won the pennant. To spoil a great catcher like O'Farrell is an expensive way of obtaining a manager and for that reason, after a conference with Bob, I have decided to make a change."

Breadon said O'Farrell had told him he would be glad to play for McKechnie and considered him the logical man for the job. The club president added that O'Farrell's salary, with the $5,000 increase, would be the largest ever paid a catcher in the ranks.

O'Farrell was appointed manager last winter to succeed Rogers Hornsby, who, after leading the Cardinals to St. Louis's first pennant and world's championship in 38 years, was traded to New York because he and Breadon could not pull together.

O'Farrell signed his player's contract last week. McKechnie signed his managership contract shortly after his arrival this morning from his home at Pittsburgh.

BILL'S CAREER COLORFUL

Still a young man, Bill McKechnie has had a long and colorful career as a player and manager. Few boys who answered the call of the diamond have done service in so many different posts. From the sandlots of the Pittsburgh section Bill stepped right along to the tune of Organized Baseball, but it was the "outlaw" Federal League which gave McKechnie a chance to direct a club. Bill stepped off the beaten path to flirt with the Feds and as manager of the Newark club he made a reputation and developed some good players.

When the peace pact was signed, McKechnie found himself back in the good graces of O. B. and he has been a prominnt personage in National League circles ever since.

After playing in the independent circuits around Pittsburgh and the P. O. M., O. & P. and Central leagues, Bill made his first real start in the majors with the Pirates in 1910. Bill stayed with the Buccos several seasons before the varying fortunes of the sport carried him to the Boston Nationals, thence to the New York Americans, but he did not tarry long with either.

McKechnie cast his lot with Indianapolis of the Federal League in 1914 and the following season he piloted the Newark Club. Peace restored, Bill was awarded to the Giants, but he played only a few games for McGraw before being traded along with Christy Mathewson to the Reds for Buck Herzog.

RETURNS TO PIRATES

McKechnie drifted out of organized baseball for a spell during the war period, his next big-league job being with his first love, the Pirates. Eventually, the Pittsburgh directors sent Bill to the American Association. He played fine ball for Joe Cantillon at Minneapolis before returning to Pittsburgh to become assistant to George Gibson.

Bill came to aid Gibby in the spring of 1922. In the midst of that race, Gibson decided to quit and McKechnie was made manager. He held the post through the remainder of the season and continued as pilot for four consecutive years. Bill was assistant to Manager Bob O'Farrell of the Cardinals last year.

Paris Plans Big Arena for Davis Cup Matches

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Final contests in 1928 for the Davis cup, premier trophy of tennisdom, with the city of Paris as custodian, will be held in an amphitheater worthy of comparison with Forest Hills and Wimbledon. A contract signed yesterday between the Racing Club of France, represented by Capt. Pierre Gillou of the French Davis cup team, and the Stade Francais, represented by Allan Muhr, Franco-American tennis expert, and a firm of Paris architects provides for the construction of a tennis arena seating 15,000 spectators.

A center court will be built, with nine additional courts, and the cost will reach about 2,000,000 francs (about $80,000).

"We must keep the Davis cup here for at least five years to get our money back," said Capt. Gillou today, "but at any rate there is no reason why Paris, the premier city of the world on the tennis courts, should be behind New York or London in tennis accommodation."

Shotten Deposes McInnis

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—John (Stuffy) McInnis was today released as manager of the Philadelphia National League baseball club and Bert H. Shotten, formerly of the St. Louis Nationals, appointed as his successor.

McInnis, who managed the Phillies one year, was given his outright release, the club announced. Being a playing manager, it was necessary to obtain waivers and these could not be asked until after October 20.

Shotten had been with the St. Louis club for a number of years as player, coach and assistant to Branch Rickey, managing the club on Sundays and during Rickey's absence.

The last two years Shotten managed Syracuse in the International League.

The Philadelphia club's estimate of Shotten, given out with the announcement of McInnis' release, stated:

"Mr. Shotten comes to the Phillies with a wide knowledge of baseball, both major and minor league, and is equipped with brains to handle a major league club and with ambition to succeed.

"He will devote all of his time to developing the interests of the club and securing results from players."

Pitt Star Ranks Ninth

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Eddie Wittmer of Princeton, Pittsburgh boy, provided the latest sensation in the race for individual college football scoring honors by making 18 points against Ohio State Saturday. The spurt carried him to fourth place among the leading point makers of the East with 64.

Myles Lane's long lead established in early season games kept the Dartmouth star in first place, although he added only one point against Brown, making his total 102. Johnny Roepke of Penn State drew closer with 82, while Nork of Georgetown tightened his grip on third place with 79. The leaders:

DEMPSEY AT FIGHTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Jack Dempsey, fandom's idol in victory or defeat, is scheduled to occupy a ringside seat tonight at the reopening of the St. Nicholas arena where three matches bringing together some of Gotham's favorite ring sons, will feature a fast card. Emil Paluso, Salt Lake City flyweight, meets Johnny Erickson, New York; Vic Burrone, New York, meets Dominick Petrone, the winner probably to battle Tony Canzoneri, and Jackie Cohen, Brownsville, boxes Battling Sammy Shack, New York.

"Easy Money," Sprout Says of Waner Act

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Can you imagine a couple of poor country boys playin' the fiddle for city folks and getting thousands of dollars for it!

Sprout Waner was as much at ease as Chic Sale in a rural type as he struck off "Turkey-in-the-Hay" with a big grin on his face. Meantime, Brother Paul, with a serious expression, was trying to get his saxophone in harmony.

"Sound your 'A' and see if that dang thing's in tune!" yelled Sprout to his older brother. As Paul messed around with the confusing keys of the sax, Lloyd gave a good imitation of a fiddler at a cross-roads dance. "This is so easy, it's a shame to take the money," Sprout's knowing smile seemed to say.

It may be work for the regular performer, but the Waner act is one big sled-ride for Sprout, who refuses to take it seriously.

The Waner boys landed this morning, fresh from Broadway, and in less than an hour Paul was rehearsing, with Sprout coming around in time to get a general lay of the land. They will appear all week in Loew's Penn Theater.

"PROS" WILLING AIDS

The stage hands and other employes of the show house displayed unusual interest in Paul and Lloyd, and the rank and file of performers have the same concern for the athletes.

Off the vast farms of Oklahoma, the two little fellows have won exceptional fame on the diamond and their act has proved a big drawing magnet.

"The other performers can't do enough for us," said Paul as he paid a compliment to the actors and actresses who have been on the same bills with them since they started their stage tour.

"This is not bad at all," drolled Lloyd. "I think both of us are putting on weight and we are playing four shows a day."

There does not appear to be any worry in the performance for Lloyd. He lets Brother Paul do the worrying, but he cuts 50-50 on the money.

Paul and Lloyd do quite a musical turn with the two instruments, and they toss the ball back and forth on the stage to add flavor to their offering.

END TOUR NEXT WEEK

The tour will bring a modest fortune to the youngsters, although it will close next week in Baltimore. Big houses have greeted them everywhere.

Despite their four shows a day

Pitt, W.-J. High TIE SLIGHT HURT TO LOCALS

By JESS CARVER.

THE list of undefeated and untied football teams of major importance, in the land was well sliced Saturday afternoon, so well, in fact, that this morning, as one scans the football horizon, three lone teams that may yet escape with perfect marks for the season are in evidence. Those three, Princeton, Georgia and Tennessee, all have more or less trying moments ahead of 'em. Especially in the case of the Tigers, who have nothing else to do next week-end than beat Yale.

Even though their claims for the Eastern championship were somewhat dented by the scoreless tie in which they engaged Saturday, Pitt and Wash-Jeff have not forfeited their final rights to the banner. If they can get through the remainder of their schedule without defeat, they will still be in the running. And why not?

Saturday's game was a disappointing one in that a decision was not gained, but I do not believe that there were many among the fifty odd thousand that saw the game who would not acknowledge Pitt's supremacy. Of course, they didn't score, and technically, the teams are supposed to be even, but Pitt showed a far better attack and an equally stern defense and much more of an inclination to take a chance.

PITT WAS WEAKENED

Here is a point that must be taken into consideration while judgment is being passed—Pitt had to send an eleven into the game with one cog very much out of place. Tom Parkinson is not a quarterback, and will never be one. He had to play that position, for Sutherland proved that he was not sending out "bear stories" by keeping both Fisher and Edwards, the regular quarterbacks, on the bench. He didn't do it just to disprove the "bear story" charge, either—he did it because it would have been suicide to have used either.

Parkinson is a fine football player, and is a fullback skillful and powerful enough to grace the backfield of any eleven in the country, but he couldn't get going at quarterback, and on more than one occasion he gummed up Pitt formations that might otherwise have functioned properly.

Pitt outgained W. & J., you've read about that if you didn't see it, and they held the Presidents' vaunted backfield to two first downs through the line, all the while making 11 through their running and aerial plays.

But there must be no discounting the sterling defensive game of the Red and Black, and their line, which before the game was accounted inferior to the Pitt wall, played up to the occasion in fine fashion. It is very possible that the men were inspired by the brilliant work of Jappy Douds.

DUKES WIN THIRD

Events throughout the tri-state section came out very much as was expected Saturday. The Durable Dukes of Duquesne ran through their third consecutive triumph by whipping St. Francis, 12-0, at Johnstown in a fine game. Right now, the Dukes are on a par with the best minor colleges of the section.

Just Another Day Wasted Away—Any 0-0 Tie

THROUGH the SPORT LENS

by HAVEY BOYLE

THE statistics of the bitter struggle between the Panthers and Wash-Jeff indicate that the Panthers "outplayed" the Presidents, but it should be made plain in all fairness to the great Wash-Jeff team that there is no implication that the Panthers were a better team. The Panthers never appeared to be close to a touchdown and even the field goals attempted by Dick Booth seemed to be hopeless cases as the Panthers prepared to make these attempts.

HAVEY BOYLE.

Wash-Jeff owned an advantage in being ready with their best strength, while Pitt was without the services of a regular quarterback, but that Fisher or Edwards could have swung the tide of battle is extremely doubtful.

A CURIOUS feature of the game was that Booth was far more troublesome to the Presidents than the great Welch. Even conceding Booth's fine talents, it was the general belief that Welch would be the boy to cause most of the havoc.

It was unfortunate, in a measure, that neither team could win to give the district more of the national spot light in a championship way, yet who will hazard an opinion that the teams acclaimed as unbeatable are strong enough to beat either the Panthers or Wash-Jeff as they played last Saturday?

ONE pleasant feature was that neither Coach Sutherland nor Coach Kerr elected to play any safety first stuff. Both teams played for a victory—and not for a tie—and that a tie game was due only to the fact that the competitors were so evenly matched.

A LINEMAN, buried as he is at the bottom of many plays, must be unusually brilliant to attract the attention that Jap Douds, Wash-Jeff tackle, attracted. There was hardly a fan who did not comment on "Number 10," Douds' number. He missed very few plays all afternoon. He was in the midst of most of them, and those that escaped him were spoiled mainly by some of his preliminary work.

Douds was not only set physically, and ready with great mechanical talent, but he was athrob with inspiration. Apparently, he was set to give the best demonstration of his work. This he did in a manner that brought back memories of black-haired Jack Sack, Red Seidelson, Thornhill, Hilty and many another Pitt lineman, so extraordinarily good that they diverted main attention from the running backs to themselves. This is what Jap Douds accomplished in the game against Pitt.

ORDINARILY, fans get a vague idea that some good man in the trenches is making holes, is smearing plays, but so brilliant was the work of Douds that everyone present wanted to talk about the great tackling of Number 10.

HE rates great consideration for any All-America team selected. But whether he makes that grade or not he can rest assured that in any future talk around Pittsburgh of great tackles the name of Douds will always pop into the conversation. He more than anyone else stopped the great Welch.

YOU will not find very often two such monuments to coaches who know how to drill boys on fundamentals as Pitt and Wash-Jeff offered last Saturday. The damp field, notwithstanding, fumbles were few, and the way both sides followed the ball was a pleasure to see.

There might have been a little more daring in the air on both sides when the early part of the conflict gave warning that a scoreless tie was a probability, considering the way both lines were holding, but any daring spirit in this direction was checked because each had almost as good a defense for the aerial attack as it had for the plays through the line and around an end.

SOME may bemoan Pitt's luck when Welch fumbled just when Booth might have booted a field goal from the 20-yard line, but that wasn't bad luck and it wasn't Welch's bad play, either. It was good work on the part of the Wash-Jeff tacklers, Cleve Cook and another one, who just smashed Welch so hard that something had to give in. It was the tackle that made Welch fumble—and that's good football and should bring the reward that Wash-Jeff gained—a fumble.

Fortunately for Aschman, a great star at center, who, however, had brought on a penalty for rough work which put Pitt in its best position of the game, was the one to recover the fumble and save his team from the plight he had put it in.

Such furious football may not be seen again for quite awhile. Yet in spite of this furious style of play, less were hurt than in many games less tough. Both sides had their boys groomed for a great physical test.

TABERSKI-NATALIE CUE MATCH MAY FALL THROUGH

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The scheduled championship match for the pocket billiard title at Schenectady, N. Y., between Frank Taberski, the champion, and P. Natalie, challenger, on November 16-18, is likely to fall through, Natalie said today, because the $550 guarantee offered in Taberski's home town is too small. Natalie obtained a $900 guarantee here, but Taberski declined the offer.

The loser's end of the Schenectady purse, Natalie said, would not pay his expenses. Arthur Woods, the next ranking challenger, may be substituted for Natalie, the latter said, if he defaults on the Schenectady match.

City Title Still Free

By TOM BIRKS.

BATTLING in the teeth of a cutting and wintry wind, that played queer pranks with all attempts at punting, the Carrick Odds and North Side C. M. C. gridders fought to a scoreless tie, with the city championship of the independent gridiron at stake at Stewart avenue grounds yesterday.

It was a typical football game played on a heavy field, with two experienced quarterbacks playing for a break that never came in the 60 minutes of toil. True, the Catholics had a good chance to score when Perkins got a clear field, only to fall in the mud and no opposition in sight.

Despite the terrible brand of winter weather existing, a crowd estimated at 2,000 was in the stands when Leo Mackey started the game. A strong sun was shining, but it might as well stayed behind those lowering clouds for all the warmth it brought.

Manager Weaver played a trump card when Jakey Bohren the old Pitt star started the game playing fullback, with Lascelles and Topsic, the Brownsville stars also in the lineup. But the C. M. C. gridders fought every inch of the way. Vainly did Bohren and Lascelles throw themselves at that Belack line. Little gains were made, and attempts at forward passes could not be completed.

Neither team showed anything but straight football, punting on the third down, with the idea of a break in mind. C. M. C. with Leahy, and Dolan carrying the ball did not get anywhere through the Carrick line, and later in the game Steve was thrown into the breach, but nothing happened. So the city title stands just as it did before the game, anybody's property who can score a touchdown. The lineup:

Carrick Odds.		North Side C.M.C.

Topsic	L. T.	Kiefer
Harpster	L. G.	Taylor
Brown	C.	Belack

SHOW AT JOHNSTOWN

Young Rudy of Charleroi meets Teddy Welch of McKeesport in the 10-round main bout of a show at Johnstown tonight. Lynn Jordan, Negro middleweight of Johnstown, and Hughey Haggerty will box a return battle in the eight-round semi-final, and Tony Tortelse of Elizabeth and Adolph Archer of Lima, O., are booked for another preliminary.

Tug Phillips of Fayette City battles Jackie Herman of Wheeling in the six-round main bout of a show at Wheeling tonight. Tommy Sullivan of Rochester boxes in the semi-final, and Bobby Fleming of the Pittsburgh Lyceum meets Johnny Buff of Wheeling in the first bout. Phillips is subbing for Nick Susnell.

K. O. (Phil) Kaplan meets Harry Ebbetts in a 10-round bout at Brooklyn and Eddie Shea, Chicago featherweight, boxes Stewart McLean at Chicago tonight.

TWO BOUTS FOR ZIVIC

Permission has been granted Jack Zivic to box Heavy Andrews at Erie, Friday night, following his battle with Sayler here tonight. Only four days will elapse between the matches, but the State Athletic Commission sometimes makes an exception to its five-day rule in the cases of boxers of known ability.

Andy Tomasky has called off his match with Joe Reagan at Hamilton, O., next Thursday night because of a split lip suffered in his bout with Harry Crisp at Akron last Friday night. This was a close battle, one of the Akron papers giving the award to Andy and another to Crisp. The pair will be rematched for Cleveland, December 6.

Rudy Ceder is training at Tarentum for his 10-round windup battle with Mike Dempsey, the Rochester, N. Y., veteran, at McKeesport, Thursday night.

Young Piazzi, of Mt. Washington, wants to land a return bout with K. O. Ferry, of McKeesport, who stopped him in two rounds at Kittanning last Thursday night. Piazzi substituted on short notice for Freddie Boylstein and claims he was hurt by a punch in the first round and never recovered.

TONY ROSS BACK HOME

Tony Ross, junior welterweight, is back home from a four months' stay in Indianapolis, where he boxed several times before breaking his right hand in a bout with Shifty Dando. The mitt is mended now, and he has several bouts in view, one in New York, another at Mason City, Ia., and one at Fond du Lac, Wis., with Myer Grace of Chicago. He would like to box Tug Phillips, Nick Susnell or any of the other local 142-pounders.

Ray Shafer of Lawrenceville will meet Willie Ptomey of Washington, Army middleweight champion, in a 10-round bout at the Maryland Theater, Cumberland, next Monday night.

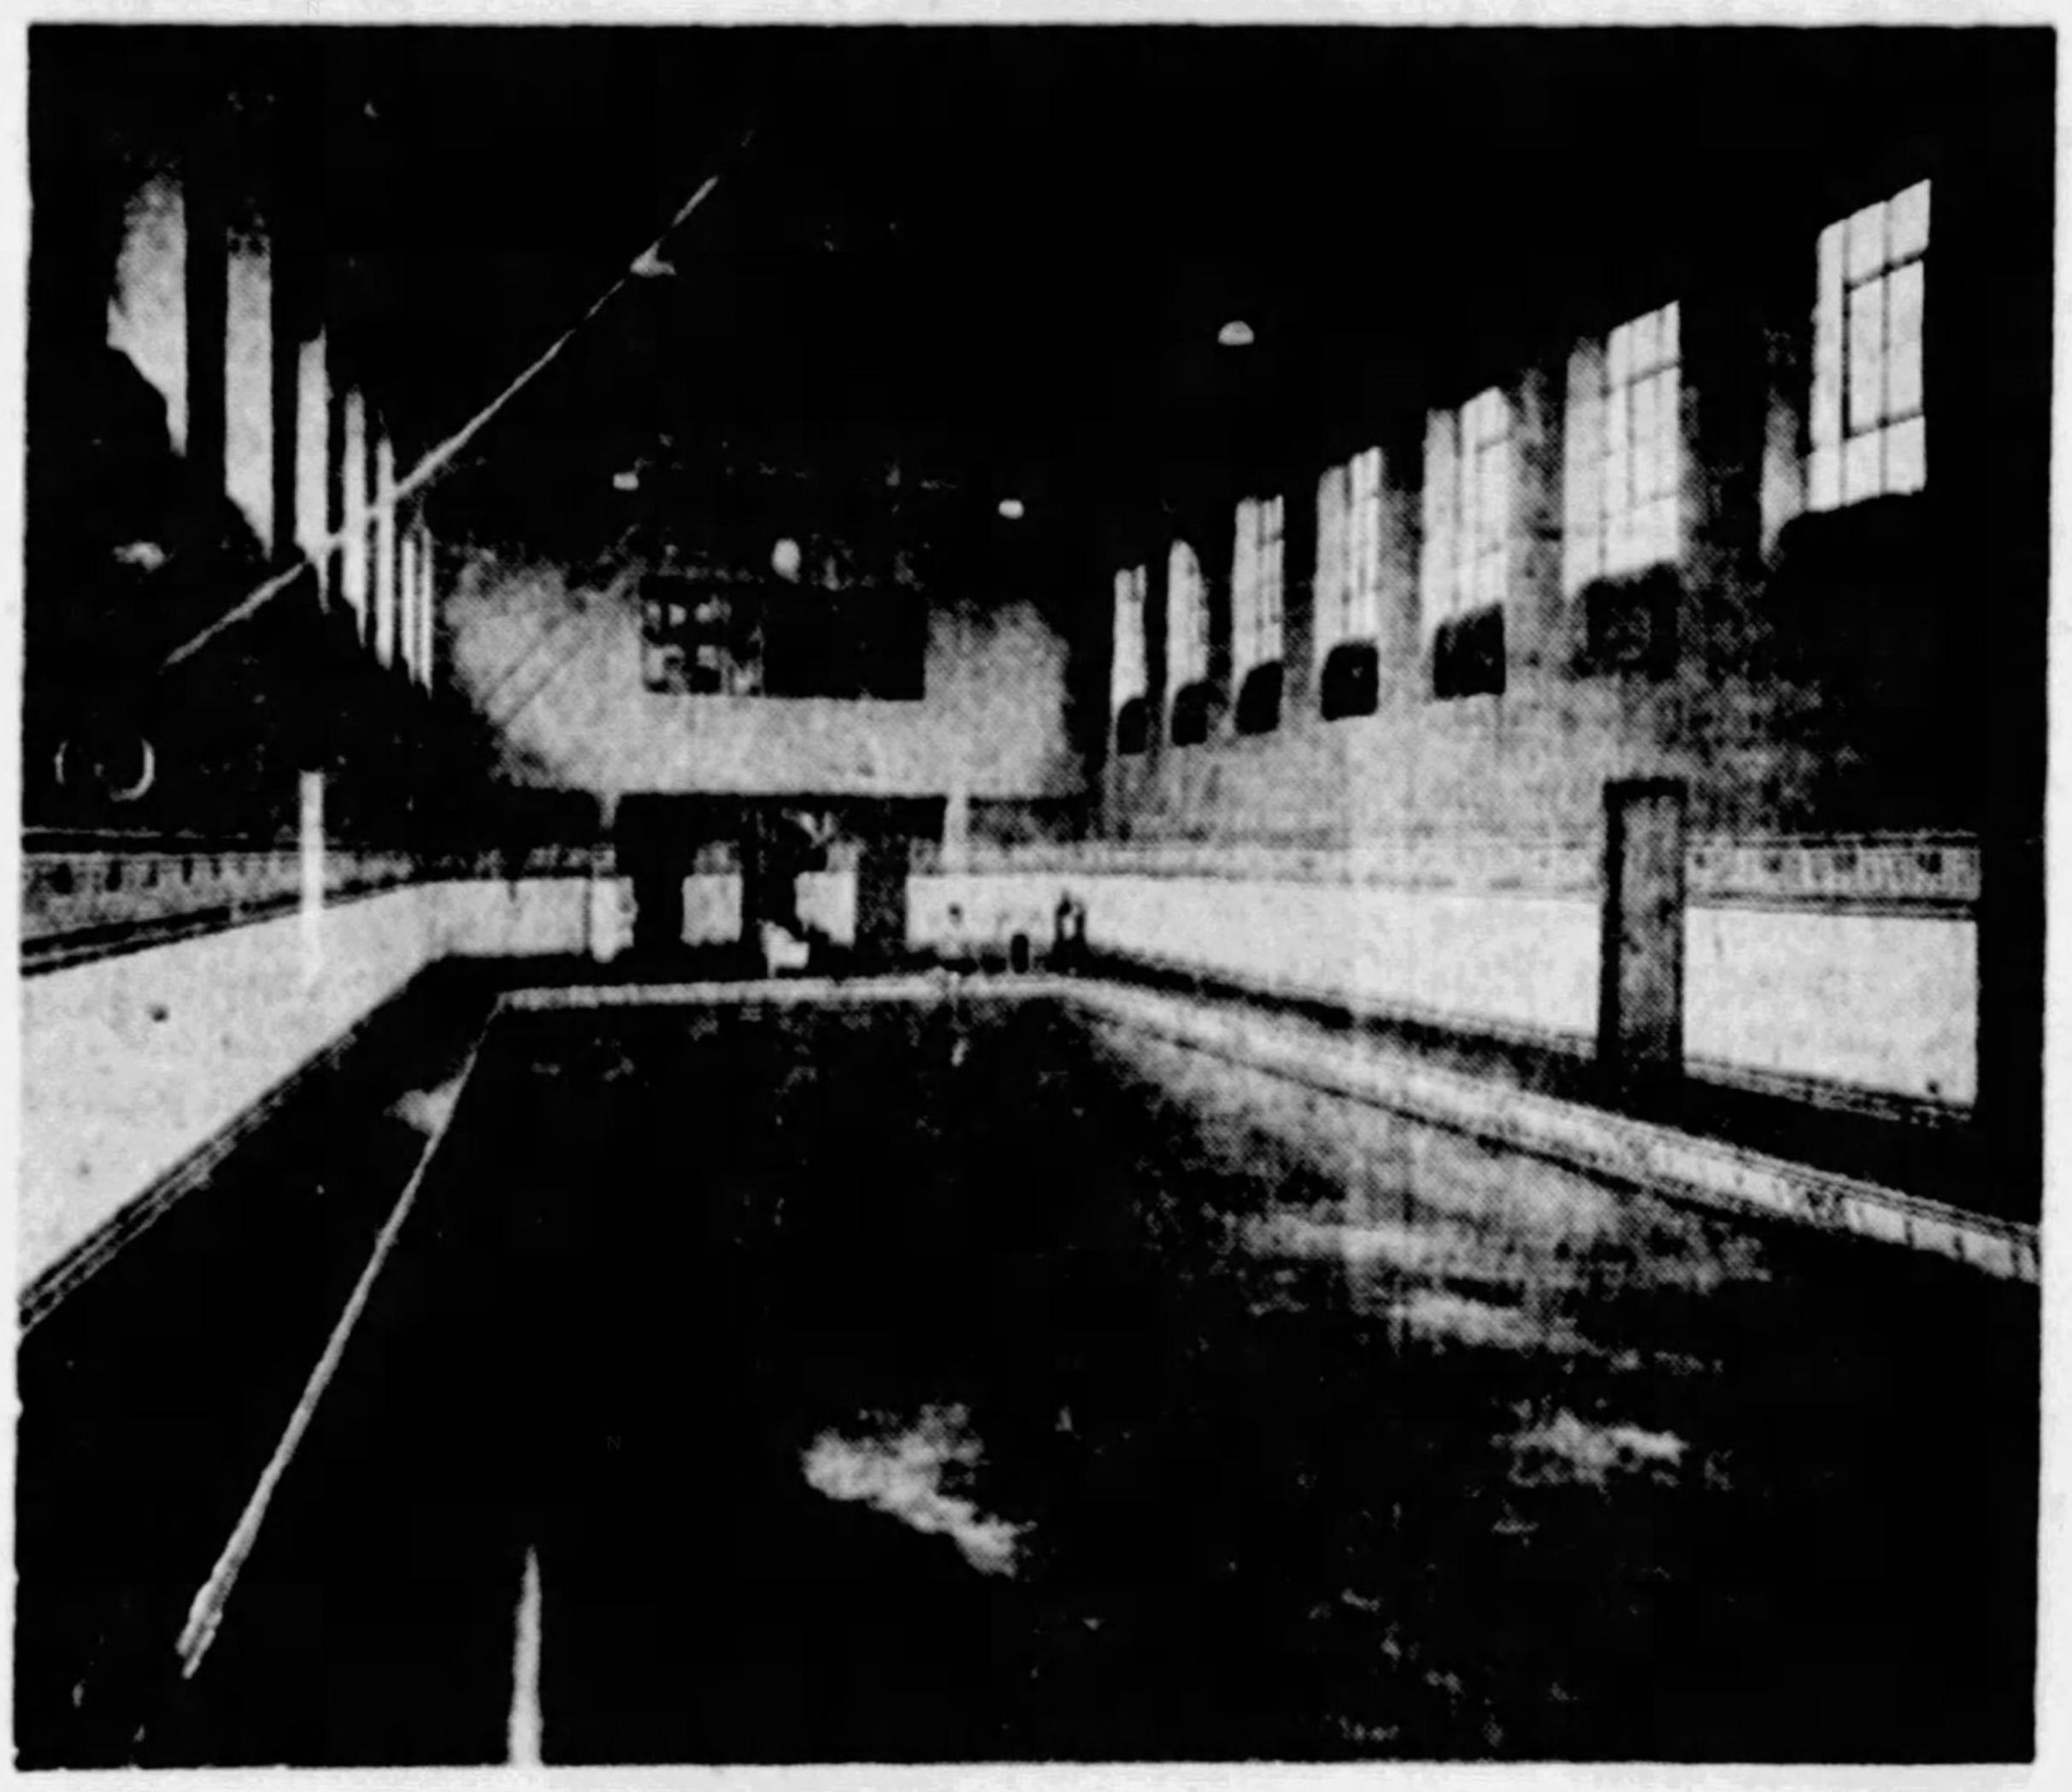
Webster Hall Swimming Pool Is Popular



Webster Hall's championship-size swimming pool, located on the top floor of the famous club hotel at Fifth avenue and Dithridge, affords daily recreation for the resident guests. Some of Pittsburgh's best swimmers have been developed in this beautiful pool, which is the scene of many aquatic contests.

By Todd W. Wright.

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away," says the old saw. By taking only a little more time than it takes to gobble an apple, the men at Webster Hall are keeping in excellent condition without buying apples at all!

In other words, they substitute "swimming" for "apples," which proves to be far more invigorating than apple-munching and twice as beneficial.

A plunge before breakfast, perhaps, or a longer swim before dinner—that's part of the Webster Hall man's regime. And this aquatic relaxation idea "ties in" beautifully with the rest of the unique building's facilities—gymnasium, handball courts, billiard room and lounges.

The whole background of Webster Hall is "athletic club" through and through. Yet the rentals—the bugaboos of many a young man who desires keen, up-to-the-minute residential surroundings — have been cut to the bone! A skillful management is operating this club hotel in a manner that affords maximum luxury at minimum cost.

You can get a single, large, light room at Webster Hall for as little as $12 a week—others for $13 and $14. Some of the big double rooms are costing their occupants only $10 a week apiece. That's reasonable club living indeed—made possible by a big organization, operating on a big scale.

Men of Pittsburgh have been invited to come up and see just what their dollars of rent will buy. A new note in residential luxury has been struck!

Dundee and Hudkins to Box Nov. 21

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The pounding fists of Joe Dundee, welterweight champion, and Ace Hudkins of Nebraska yet may settle the squabble which started when Dundee failed to appear for a title bout last Thursday and which had a court echo with the arrest of the champion, his manager and Dick Donald, the promoter, on charges of false advertising.

The bout became a prospect last night when the promoter, the champion and his manager, Max Waxman, and Seth W. P. Strelinger, the local member of the State Athletic Commission, agreed to staging the 10-round fight here November 21. The scene would be Wrigley Field, site of last Thursday's fiasco, where 17,000 disappointd ticketholders rioted when only two preliminaries were staged instead of the title bout they paid more than $72,000 to see.

HUDKINS TO AGREE

The plan for the fight two weeks hence has not yet been passed upon by Hudkins or his manager, who were not present at the conference, which resulted in the Dundee agreement. The other principals, however, foresaw little difficulty from the Hudkins camp, inasmuch as the Nebraskan is eager for a chance at the title. The proposed bout arrangements also are to be passed upon by the other two members of the State Athletic Commission, but Strelinger said he believed they would concur in the plan, as the affair had been left in his hands.

Strelinger announced that those of last Thursday's spectators who had purchased reserved seat tickets and retained the stubs would be given the same seats at the fight on November 21. Some other plan, which the commissioner admitted none of the conferees were ingenious enough to invent, would be necessary to provide for the thousands who paid their $2.20 each for general admission and received no rain checks or other means of identification when Dundee failed to appear. Most of the reserved seat patrons also are without their ticket stubs, having hurled them to the ground in disgust last Thursday. Later small boys gleaned the pasteboards by the fistful.

In case the new fight plans are approved officially, a system of posted bonds will be provided to hold fighters and promoter to the agreement.

TO POST BONDS

The plans call for $50,000 to be posted by Donald with Tom Gallery of the Hollywood American Legion Stadium as stakeholder, and to be paid Dundee as his guarantee at the close of the fight. Dundee would post $20,000 and Hudkins $10,000 to assure their appearance in the ring.

It was his failure to obtain the $50,000 guarantee promised him under an unofficial contract with Donald which caused Dundee to refuse to fight. The question of a referee, under the new agreement, was placed in the hands of Strelinger. Dundee agreed to accept any referee the commissioner chooses.

WESTERN TEAMS TO PLAY PENN QUINTET IN EAST

Pennsylvania and Yale will open the intercollegiate basketball race at Philadelphia December 21. Among contests to be staged in the large Penn gymnasium which will seat 10,000, will be contests with Michigan, December 21; Ohio State, January 2, and Notre Dame, January 7.

WILD GAME DELEGATES TO MEET IN GOTHAM

The national game conference will be held in New York City December 5 and 6. Conservation problems of national importance will be discussed by delegates from all over this country. Game refuge legislation to be placed before Congress will be proposed at the session.

Even Chess Has a Limit

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 7.—The twenty-fifth game in the chess championship between Dr. Jose Capablanca, of Cuba, and Alexander Alekhine, Russian champion, was adjourned last night after 40 moves. Alekhine has won four games and Capablanca two. Eighteen games have been drawn. The winner of six games will win the contest. At the time of adjournment tonight the players each had nine pieces on the board.

HOT FIGHTS MARK GRID RACES

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Hot fights for Conference honors and mythical sectional titles all over the country left college football in the following situation:

EAST

Princeton, only undefeated and untied major eleven in the section, is out in front with Yale, beaten only by Georgia, close behind. Washington and Jefferson, Pittsburgh, and New York University have ties alone against them.

WESTERN CONFERENCE

Illinois has a clean slate with three victories and no defeats in Conference battles. Minnesota, tied by Indiana, ranks second.

SOUTHWESTERN CONFERENCE

Texas Aggies show the way with two wins and no defeats. Arkansas and Southern Methodist each has been whipped once.

R. M. CONFERENCE

Although one loss has been pinned on the best in this section, Colorado Aggies, with four successes, have a slight margin on Colorado College and Denver University, winners in three engagements.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE

Georgia and Tennessee, neither defeated nor tied and both boasting four victories, lead the parade, although North Carolina State challenges with three wins.

PACIFIC COAST

Stanford has only a slight edge over Southern California in the Far West sector, boasting three wins to two for the Cardinals. Their own meeting was a tie.

Two Skibo Teams To Play Here Next Friday

A doubleheader is scheduled for Forbes Field Friday, Armistice Day, when Carnegie Tech's varsity eleven faces Western Reserve University of Cleveland, O., and the Tartan plebes' undefeated team clashes with the Washington-Jefferson frosh in the closing event of the season. Thus football fans will be treated to a rare dish as a holiday attraction.

SHOTS and PASSES

—by Julius Levin

LACKING the courage to accept the bluff of the Knickerbockers and the Homewood Presbyterian Church team, who withdrew from the West Penn League last Thursday, managers of the quintets enrolled in this amateur circuit yesterday voted to operate as a seven-club loop, thus eliminating the Doc Gordons and the Ray Schneider Club as applicants for berths.

The Knickerbockers and Homewood withdrew last week rather than compete against the Gordons, A. A. U. champions, who were voted the franchise left vacant by the withdrawal of the Duquesne Saltzers.

Had the officials of the league accepted their resignations and awarded their franchises to two other applicants the West Penn League today would have been a compact eight-club circuit instead of a seven-club affair. As a result all teams in the league will be forced to book independent clubs to fill their schedules.

The seven clubs now enrolled in the West Penn League are Webster Hall, Kingsley House, Sharpsburg Y. M. C. A., Heinz House, Knickerbockers, Trinity Church and Homewood Presbyterian Chuch.

BUCKETS SANDOMIRE, former star of the Coffey, Amerita and Butler clubs, will leave next week for Philadelphia for a trial with the American Professional League team representing that city.

Sandomire is one of the greatest professional stars ever developed in this section of the state and his numerous friends feel certain he will make the grade in the Carr circuit.

The former Coffey star has been keeping in excellent shape for the opening of the winter indoor game. He should have no trouble winning a berth on the Philadelphia quintet.

TOM MILLER, former star at Shadyside Academy and last year one of the stellar performers on the Kingsley House quintet, will wear the colors of Webster Hall in the West Penn League this winter.

Miller, originally a center, was shifted to guard by Coach Fred Yetter of Kingsley House and immediately developed into one of the best enrolled in the West Penn League.

Miller's fine work with Kingsley House last year played an important role in the great showing of the East Liberty passers. He should prove a valuable addition to the Webster Hall team this winter.

McCracken, leading scorer in the Philadelphia Company League last year, is one of the leading candidates for a berth on the Sharpsburg Y. M. C. A. quintet this winter. Coach Schrandt is in charge of this West Penn League entry.

Meetings will be held in Kaufmann's this week to organize the City League and junior circuits. There are 15 applicants filed for berths in the City League, according to J. J. Freund, Jr., organizer of the circuit.

Dope Kriegar, Joey Singer and Dave Oiburn, stars on the Y. M. H. A. quintet last winter, indulged in their first workout of the season yesterday. All three appeared to be in excellent shape for the opener.

Paul Beswick has been named to succeed Tom Winnie asmanager of the ceed Tom Winnie as manager of the Three members having resigned, the arbitration board of the West Penn League will be reorganized at a meeting to be held this week.

Deprived of their franchise in the West Penn League, the Doc Gordons will play an independent schedule this winter. They plan to meet the leading amateur teams in this district.

Sammy Klateman, star forward of the Sumer Somerman Club, has been elected captain of the team. The Somermans will operate in the P. & O. League this winter.

with the possible exception Geneva. Geneva beat Duquesne 20-0 early in the season, but they wouldn't do it now.

Carnegie Tech took another on the chin by losing 20-6 to New York U. Tech keeps on scoring, but so do the other teams. The Tartans didn't enter the game with any high hopes of winning, but they hardly expected the Violets to score three touchdowns on them.

Thiel scored a safety on Allegheny and beat the Methodists just by that two point margin and no more. The heavy field and wet, slippery ball interfered with Tommy Holleran's fine aerial game, engineered by Stanley Berkman.

Westminster and Waynesburg staged a drab 0-0 battle at Waynesburg, in mud up to their waists, according to Andrew Jasper McDonald. This is the second time that Waynesburg has been held to a scoreless tie by a Conference eleven this year. Thiel played them to a standstill earlier in the year.

Geneva won what they claim is the minor college championship of the section by defeating a lighter and inexperienced Grove City team 13-0, thus securing revenge for the 2-0 defeat the Crimson landed last fall. It marked the first time since his advent at Geneva that Bo McMillin has been able to beat Grove City. He always ran into those Warner system, Pitt inspired teams before.

BETHANY BEATEN

Bethany stepped out of the state for a game with Wittenberg in Ohio and lost 3-0. The Bisons are having a tough year, and about all they have left is the pleasant memory of the days when Ira Rodgers used to play fullback for 'em.

West Virginia turned in a notable piece of work and staged what might be termed as a "moral comeback" by holding Missouri to 13-0 and outplaying the highly touted Westerners for the greater part of the ball game.

The task ahead of Pitt this week is a tremendous one, easily as tough as was the W. & J. hurdle, which both of them knocked down. Nebraska's 200-pound machine will be in town this week, with the touted, and justly so, Presnell rearing to show 'em how a real fullback "fullbacks." The Cornhuskers walloped dear, dear old Kansan Saturday 47-13, which shows that to score 13 points on Nebraska simply means that you run the risk of getting half a hundred scored on yourself.

ILLINOIS KEEPS IN FRONT IN BIG TEN

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Illinois and Minnesota remain the leaders of the Big Ten Conference race.

Notre Dame's hopes for an uncontested national title were smashed by the Gopher tie game at South Bend.

These are the high lights of the Middle-western football situation following a hectic Saturday of the gridiron sport.

The big game of the day, either in the East, South, North or West was at South Bend. There Mr. Rockne's highly touted Notre Dame eleven was able to score only an even break with Doc Spears' man-crushing Minnesota team.

Both of the touchdowns were scored on the breaks of the game, as both came from opposition fumbles. So possibly if the right kind of football had been played, it would have been a scoreless tie.

Joesting and Flanagan, of course, were the outstanding stars.

Illinois retained her Conference lead by defeating Iowa 14 to 0 at Iowa City. Minnesota, too, has been undefeated, but the Gophers were tied by Indiana.

Michigan, recovering from her defeat at the hands of Illinois last Saturday, primly trounced Mr. A. A. Stagg's Chicago Maroons 14 to 0. But be it said right here, that it is very doubtful if they would have scored one touchdown if Capt. Ken Rouse of Chicago had not been injured at the start of the second period and was taken from the game.

Chicago had the better of the going during the first half, although there was little advantage to that. It was, however, impossible for Michigan to score, or even gain very far as long as he was in the game. He is, probably, one of the best centers in the game.

Northwestern took her third successive defeat at the hands of Purdue. With "Cotton" Wilcox back in the game after being out most of the season, the Purple didn't have a chance.

Sande Granted Chance to Tell Own Story

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Professing his innocence of any wrong, Earl Sande, noted jockey, barred from all North American tracks for commiting an alleged foul during the Pimlico Futurity Friday, has requested a complete investigation of his riding.

Sande announced tonight he had mailed a request to the Maryland Racing Commission that he be permitted to tell his story and to introduce three witnesses in his behalf, All jockeys who rode in the futurity.

A member of the commission, which revoked Sande's license as a jockey, said the rider's request will be granted.

Sande was set down by the commission on the report of William Boyle, a patrol judge, that he "deliberately cut across in front of Reigh Count, the favorite, forcing him against the rail and ruining his stride." The accused declared Jockey C. Lang, riding the favorite, pulled his blouse when Reigh Count and his mount, Bateau, were leading at the home stretch.

PENN STATE BASKETBALL SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 7.—The Penn State basketball schedule for the coming season, announced yesterday by the student-manager, Richard N. Wills, lists 15 games for the Lions, 14 of which are with college opponents. The other will be with Penn State alumni at the close of the season. The schedule was approved by the athletic board of control. Of the teams scheduled for this season all except two, Western Maryland and Colgate, were played last year. Syracuse, Pitt, and Carnegie will be played twice. The schedule is as follows:

DARTMOUTH'S COAST ALUMNI ENJOY GAME

SPORT COMMENT

Panther athlete extraordinary, was the other.

It is true that Welch did not make any of his usual sensational runs, for good reasons; and it is true that he was so unfortunate as to have the ball slip out of his clutches at a point from which the Panthers might have been able to score.

But when you consider the straits in which Welch was working, and the situation that forced him to carry the weight of the entire game on his sturdy shoulders, it will be seen that Gibby played one of the most heroic roles of the whole season in American football.

Just imagine what a task it was for Welch to be captain, signal-caller, and star of the offense, carrying the additional burden of a backfield in which he alone was "right," with the usually redoubtable Booth just out of a 10-day sickbed, the dashing Edwards and dependable Fisher unable to play at all, Hagan sorely crippled, and Parkinson playing a position he had never even attempted until three days before.

THOUGH roughly, but cleanly, handled by a fighting, stalwart Wash-Jeff team that recognized in him the one victory menace remaining in the Pitt lineup, Welch kept his head up, his mind clear, his fighting spirit conspicuous right to the finish.

And if some who saw the game wonder why he didn't mix up his plays to the extent that he generally does, remember that he had only two ball-carrying possibilities—Booth and himself.

Furthermore, it was not by choice, but from necessity, that Welch shot his attack against the mighty Douds at left tackle so often, as the halfback who naturally carries the ball against the opposite side of the line was not in condition to do any carrying.

MANY spectators believe that the best players in Saturday's game were Welch and Jap Douds.

The latter carried W. & J.'s safety on his broad shoulders, and it was a treat, even to spectators of pronounced Blue and Gold leanings, to see this huge blond play tackle as it should be played, and as few save the Fats Henrys and Claude Thornhills have ever played it in this annual classic.

Again and again Douds hurled the Pitt line back against its backs, forcing Welch to circle wide to get around the pile. Again and again he tore the interference to shreds, giving Aschman or Kirkman an easy tackle on an unprotected Pitt ball carrier. And he's a ballhawk, too, on top of all other qualities.

As for Welch, considering the responsibility he carried, the fact that he was all but "in there alone," so far as backfield strength was concerned, any who have withheld approval so far must join the chorus that ranks him as equal to any halfback that ever graced a Pittsburgh field, and to any man playing the position today, here or elsewhere.

BEYOND cavil, the best end on the field Saturday was young Joe Donchess, whose marvelous tackling and uncanny judgment of plays made the afternoon a miserable one for Amos, Heisel and their mates.

Good also was Guarino, a well-rounded, clever terminal man.

W. & J.'s ends were not so good, but their inferiority was largely covered by the power of their tackles, who made the ends' jobs easy.

Only the most severe critic could find fault with the work of any man in either line in that combat of strong forwards. Defensively, neither line left a thing to be desired. Offensively, the Pitt men opened a way for their ball carriers oftener than did the W. & J. forwards.

Kern was good, as always. Cutler was splendid. The Pitt guards, notably outweighed, were not outplayed.

On the Wash-Jeff side, much can be said for the cleverness of Aschman, and the drive of Gallagher and Malcolm, as well as Douds, of course. And both centers handled a slippery ball excellently.

DAMON RUNYON SAYS

MY OLD friend, Otto C. Floto of the Denver Post, in my opinion the greatest living authority on the manly art of smacking snoots, doesn't think much of modern referees and said so recently.

DAMON RUNYON.

One of his readers takes him to task, saying:

"You seem to be quite severe on the present-day referees. Don't you think it human to err? I note, particularly, you praise George Siler to the skies. Do you think Siler ever made a mistake during his career?"

And now I print Mr. Floto's answer, because he tells a good story that will interest the oldtimers, and perhaps some of the young 'uns, too.

"IN REPLY to Mr. Gooding's letter, I am going to very frankly say that referees make mistakes, of course. The best of them do that, and I have seen them do it. I also was present when George Siler, the greatest referee of them all, pulled the most monumental 'boner' of his entire career. A lapse of mind, even though a temporary lapse, in the fight saved Tommy Ryan from a knockout.

"That was the first time I ever saw Siler lose control of his action in the ring and become excited. Generally he was as cool as the proverbial cucumber, able to meet every emergency as it arise. But this time, unaccountable as it seems, his mind was not on his work.

"It was when Tommy Ryan and Billy McMillan, of Washington, fought their great battle in the Indiana woods. What a wet and nasty place it was! I shiver to think of it now. After gathering at the Erie freight house in Chicago, we boarded a special train, which arrived at the battlefield about 1 a. m.

"IT was far too dark to pitch the ring to commence hostilities. So we had to wait along the side of the railroad track, while the rain was drenching us, until 6 o'clock in the morning. This had to be done, as we could not remain in the coach, because it was on the main track and had to be taken to a siding many miles away.

"As daybreak dawned the tent was pitched in a dense woods about one-half mile from the track.

"We found an open space just big enough to suit the occasion, and the woods hid us from prying eyes and hostile constabulary. After we witnessed a few fights among the spectators, which seemed customary in those days, the men entered the ring.

"As I recall it now McMillan swung a terrific haymaker to Ryan's jaw in the very first round, which dropped him to the floor like a log. I never will forget how Tommy fell. He went down on his face and then rolled over on his back.

"Just as Ryan went down his manager, Lou Houseman, who, by the way, is one of the best fellows in the world, forgot himself and jumped into the ring to argue with Siler about some nonsensical claim he was making, which never existed. Siler, instead of beginning to count, lost his head and began to argue with Houseman.

"To begin with, Siler had no right to even argue at the time, for when Houseman jumped into the ring that act, by all the rules of the game, disqualified Ryan. Houseman then stepped back out of the ropes and away from the ring, and then, and then only, Siler started his count.

"I FORGET how long Ryan was down, but it must have been 20 seconds or more. At the time I could not understand why McMillan's seconds failed to demand the fight for their man. They probably would have received the verdict had they so appealed to Siler, who quickly would have seen the situation in the right light, but they never even peeped or chirpd. Probably it was because the tough Chicago crowd around the ring awed them.

"THE wallop that laid Ryan low was an awful punch and landed right on the button. Ryan had but himself to blame, for it was an accidental haymaker and chiefly due to carelessness on Ryan's part, or it could not have happened, for Tommy outclassed McMillan as a fighter from every angle. But accidents count just the same in the ring as they do elsewhere.

"AFTER Ryan had recovered he proved his great supremacy over the man from Washington by not only boxing rings around him, but also handing him the trimming of his life, and he did it without apparent effort.

"BUT by the action of Siler or Houseman, or on whom the blame rests, Ryan's record is spared from registering a defeat at the hands of Billy McMillan.

"THE absolutely reliable and experienced George Siler made one of the few mistakes of his entire career that night. He looked very amateurish by the manner in which he handled affairs in that first round. Probably it was the sudden and unlooked-for action on the part of Houseman that must have upset him.

"SO, you see, even men of the Siler type can make mistakes. I have seen many others do similar things, and it proves what can happen to the best of them."

WESLEYAN-BROADDUS GAME CARDED THURSDAY

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Nov. 6—The date of the annual game between West Virginia Wesleyan and Broaddus College has been moved up a day and the contest will be played on Thursday of this week, instead of Friday. It was to have been the Armistice Day attraction in the little Upshur county seat, but the change came as the result of other conflicting occasions.

Jack Holds 6500 Shares

By MURRAY LEWIN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, has purchased approximately 6,500 shares of Madison Square Garden stocks, Tex Rickard officially announced. The promoter estimated the purchase price at $150,000.

According to Rickard, of the 1,100 Garden stockholders at present, only four or five hold larger blocks than Dempsey. Tex said he advised the Manassa mauler to buy Cauliflower, preferred, as it is a safe and sound investment.

When quizzed as to whether or not it meant that Dempsey would now positively show in the Garden this winter, to help boost the value of his stocks, Rickard said he was not in a position to state now.

"Dempsey has assured me that he will make his plans known after his case with Jack Kearns is settled," said Tex. "It is no secret that he plans to return to the ring, particularly to get another shot at Gene Tunney. Of course this match all depends on what Jack shows in a preliminary fight."

From friends close to the former heavyweight champion, it is learned that he will probably buy another $150,000 worth of stock before announcing his plans for the future, in hope that the stock may rise with the announcement. Jack, it is said, hoped to buy a large block of stock early last summer before he encountered Jack Sharkey, but only the fact that his funds were low prevented him from buying then.

Dempsey cleaned up nearly $900,000 in his two bouts this year. He is reported to have received approximately $425,000 for his battle with Sharkey and $450,000 for his recent party with Tunney. Of this amount, Dempsey had no manager to pay the regular 50 per cent fee to, as Leo P. Flynn, who directed all his business for both bouts, is said to have received a mere $15,000 for his trouble.

TEX TO INVADE BOSTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The New York Times says today that Tex Rickard, Madison Square Garden promoter, left for Boston last night to confer with business men interested in the erection there of a sports arena similar to the Garden.

Although the paper said building of a second arena of the same type, both to be run under the direction of Rickard, also was contemplated in Chicago ,the promoter refused to comment.

Local Cue League Formed

A PITTSBURGH Three-Cushion Billiard League, in which leading parlors of the Pittsburgh district will enter their best talent, was organized at a meeting of local cue enthusiasts at the Charles Ellis parlors, Diamond street, yesterday afternoon.

E. Z. Wainwright of the P. A. A., who has represented the Steel City in national amateur tourneys for many years, was elected as the first president of the league. Charles Ellis was elected secretary and Charles Dimling was named treasurer.

The league season will open on November 16 and will close late in the spring. The circuit is the first of its kind here. Billiard parlors granted franchises and the contestants they will place in the league competition are as follows:

Billy Greenwood and Dale Campbell, representing Ellis; Eddie Kress and George Pitfield, Dimling's room in Smithfield street; Wainwright and William Eichenmuller, Jess Rudy's Brunswick room in Penn avenue, East Liberty; Robert Carter, Kalmar's room, Atwood and Forbes. Tentative entries include the Kenny room, Oakland, with Frank Jones or P. P. Trump, former interstate league players, and the Crookston room in East Liberty, with John A. Clinton, national amateur 18.2 balkline champion as player.

In order that all may stand an equal chance of annexing the league title, the players will be handicapped at a meeting of the handicap committee at the Ellis parlors Sunday afternoon. It is thought that Greenwood and Jones, both Interstate League players, will be the only scratch men.

Here Is One Pass Coach Does Not Favor

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Whether more Muhlenberg varsity football players will turn in their uniforms and call the season completed so far as they are concerned will become known this afternoon when Coach Haps Benfer holds practice.

Reports are being circulated that more will quit the team as a result of Coach Benfer "firing" Nick Borelli, for what he termed indifference during the first half of the Muhlenberg-Ursinus game here Saturday. Nick was "fired" between halves. Frank Borelli and Capt. Dickert then quit with Borelli.

Coach Benfer has refused to comment on the episode. Friends of the players say they were "peeved" because the coach failed to provide them with theater passes. Others say "frat" rivalry was the cause of the trouble.

WILSON'S TOE GIVES STEAM ROLLERS TIE

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Matching its line against that of the Bears and doing better than holding its own through Wildcat George Wilson's good punting, the Providence eleven of the National Professional Football League held the Chicago Bears to a scoreless tie before 5,000 here yesterday.

The Bears missed numerous opportunities to score, including four attempted field goals by Driscoll and a fumbled forward pass in the end zone by Hanny.

WIN ON "13" NOW

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—"How times have changed," say the fans as they see Southern California win football games by scoring 13 points. They all remember last year when Southern California dropped the P. C. C. championship by the score 13-12 and then lost to Notre Dame by the same score. This year they have defeated Oregon Aggies 13-12; tied Stanford, 13-13 and won over California, 13-0.

TRUTH IS MIGHTIER THAN McGOVERN'S FICTION!

Through his campaign committee Controller C. C. McGovern, repudiated by the people at the ballot box on September 20, and now an independent candidate for another office, has been hurling a series of questions, each loaded with falsity, misrepresentation and innuendo, at County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock, who here and now, honestly and frankly meet McGovern's statements which are camouflaged as questions.

The McGovern "Questions," criticising the County Commissioners, are reproduced and willingly given wider circulation in order that the TRUTH, which Commissioners Armstrong and Babcock do not fear, may be squarely stacked up against them, McGovern's duplicity unmasked and the deceptive character of his campaign laid bare. Armstrong and Babcock deal with every McGovern question and particularly his chronic cry about an audit, letting the facts prove that—

THE CONTROLLER PREVENTED AN AUDIT

1. WHY have the present County Commissioners refused a County audit by Certified Public Accountants?

The Controller well knows that the county commissioners have neither the power to grant nor to refuse an audit by certified public accountants. This power rests solely with the Court of Common Pleas. WHAT THE COMMISSIONERS DID REFUSE WAS THE CONTROLLER'S REQUEST FOR AN APPROPRIATION OF $10,000 WITH WHICH HE PROPOSED TO MAKE AN ILLEGAL AUDIT. The commissioners acted on advice of counsel, who also advised the Controller of the legal way to procure an audit. He was told he must go before the Court prior to the first day of February, 1927, when his Annual Report was due, make his complaints, and tell the Court that he was unable to make an audit. The Court would then have ordered the county commissioners, or other officials involved, to make answer within sixty days. If the reply was not satisfactory an audit of the county business would then be ordered by the court and the county commissioners instructed to advertise for competitive bids from expert public accountants. THIS IS THE ONLY WAY IN WHICH AN AUDIT OF THIS KIND CAN BE OBTAINED UNDER THE LAW AND THE CONTROLLER KNOWS IT. But instead of embracing the only legal method to obtain an audit he forsook this plan and filed his Annual Report before the Honorable John A. Evans, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas on the 31st day of January, 1927, in which he made a sworn statement of the financial affairs of Allegheny County. At that time he made no complaint about the conduct of any county office. ANY BLAME FOR FAILURE TO HAVE AN AUDIT BY CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS RESTS SQUARELY ON THE SHOULDERS OF THE CONTROLLER BECAUSE HE DISREGARDED THE ONE LAW WHICH COULD HAVE BROUGHT IT ABOUT. But, perhaps, even with all of his agitation, Controller McGovern was the last man in Allegheny County who really wanted an audit because if he had obtained said audit it would have robbed him of his pet campaign issue.

2. WHY did the present County Commissioners increase their Department of Public Works pay roll from $1,483,127.46 in 1923 to $2,670,203.08 in 1926? An increase of 80%.

In asking this question the Controller shows a deplorable ignorance of the facts. In 1923 there was no Department of Public Works. The county's building projects were in charge of the Road Department and the County Engineer. They had authority to hire outside architectural and engineering services which were paid for on a commission basis. The payroll totals of these various divisions operating in 1923 are no doubt the ones used as basis for comparison in this question. They are deceiving for they do not include the commissions paid to outside architects and engineers, which in the year 1923 alone amounted to more than $500,000. Confronted with the people's great improvement program the county commissioners, as an economical measure, established the Department of Public Works, thus abolishing all outside exorbitant commission fees. AS A MATTER OF FACT, THE PAYROLL INCREASE INCURRED THROUGH THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS AMOUNTS TO 22%, WHEREAS THE AMOUNT OF WORK ACTUALLY DONE BY THE COUNTY HAS INCREASED OVER 300%. In 1923 the total work done by the county amounted to $3,280,456.00, whereas the work done in 1926 amounted to $9,056,950.82. Further justification for the payroll increase is in the fact that in 1923 only 23 miles of road were resurfaced while by 1926 the county was resurfacing 60 miles per year. It is not the purpose of the present board of county commissioners to economise falsely at the expense of the taxpayers by allowing roads that have cost millions to be broken down and ruined.

3. WHY have the present County Commissioners allowed public improvements to cost the people more than 30% above contract prices?

This is an absolute falsehood, originating in the mind of a man utterly without any knowledge of public work. As a matter of fact the amount of contract work to date totals $31,085,670.63. THE TOTAL AMOUNT EXPENDED FOR EXTRA WORK REPRESENTS NOT 30%, BUT 1.7% OF THE COST, MUCH LESS THAN IS CUSTOMARY IN PRIVATE CONSTRUCTION.

4. WHY have County taxes increased 60% in the last four years?

This is a falsehood also. The fact is that taxes have increased 43% since 1923, but in that same period the service given to the people and the work done on public improvements has increased over 300%. So that the people are getting a far larger return for their money than ever before. WHILE THIS INCREASE BY COMPARISON OF FIGURES SEEMS LARGE IT MUST BE CONSIDERED THAT ALLEGHENY COUNTY DURING THAT TIME HAS EMERGED FROM A CONDITION OF STAGNATION TO ONE OF UNPARALELLED PROGRESS IN PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT. It must be remembered that the 300% increase in improvements was achieved while holding the county's taxation to the THIRD LOWEST IN THE STATE!

5. WHY did the present County Commissioners allow their clerks to have hundreds of thousands of dollars of the County's money in unbonded private checking accounts until stopped by Controller McGovern?

This is another untruth because IT WAS THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WHO PUT A STOP TO THIS PRACTICE AND NOT THE CONTROLLER. The public should know that no money was paid out by the commissioners' clerks under the old system until EVERY ITEM ON EVERY PAYROLL HAD BEEN CHECKED BY THE CONTROLLER, APPROVED BY THE CONTROLLER AND A WARRANT ISSUED, BY THE CONTROLLER, RELEASING THE NECESSARY FUNDS TO MEET SAID PAYROLL. THE COMMISSIONERS' CLERKS HANDLED NO CASH. They merely wrote and distributed checks conforming to the payrolls sent to them by the Controller. After these payrolls had been signed by the employees signifying receipt of their pay they were returned to the Controller who became their sole custodian. THE CONTROLLER, HIMSELF, THEREFORE HAD AN ABSOLUTE CHECK ON EVERYTHING BOTH BEFORE AND AFTER PAYMENT. However, the commissioners decided to place the responsibility for this work where it properly belongs, under the County Treasurer, where the paymaster, who pays all other county employees, is located.

6. WHY did the present County Commissioners permit their clerks to sign payrolls for other county employes amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars, until stopped by Controller McGovern?

The answer to this is covered in No. 5.

7. WHY did the present County Commissioners permit the use of County trucks, material and labor in private enterprises?

The county commissioners did not consent to nor permit the use of county trucks, material or labor for private enterprises, except in cases where a property owner affected by an improvement made by the county was entitled to consideration due to damages made to his property, or through an act of charity, as in the case of a poor religious institution, for which the county commissioners offer no apology.

8. WHY have the present County Commissioners used thousands of dollars of the people's bond money for purposes other than those voted by the people?

No bond money has ever been diverted from its purposes by the present board of County Commissioners and the CONTROLLER, HIMSELF, HAS APPROVED EVERY VOUCHER FOR EVERY EXPENDITURE OF BOND MONEY, OTHERWISE IT COULD NOT HAVE BEEN PAID BY THE TREASURER. A statement of this kind coming from him shows that he does not know his own duties or is willing to deliberately misrepresent.

9. WHY did the present Board of County Commissioners allow the Board of Tax Revision to cost the County $479,089.87 in 1926?

The Controller should know that the Board of Tax Revision is constituted by Acts of Assembly. It's duty is to appraise the valuation of property taxable for county purposes, which it has done and placed at $2,500,000,000. Upon this valuation all county taxes are levied. This board, therefore, is the foundation of the county government. Taking the figures given in the question it will be seen that the cost of making this gigantic appraisal, if rated on a percentage basis, is less than 2-100 of 1%.

10. WHY have the present County Commissioners permitted the Pennsylvania Underwriters' Association to write 43% of all contract bonds and 42% of all the County's insurance during 1926—as against a field of twenty-nine competitors?

The present county commissioners have not permitted the Pennsylvania Underwriters or anyone else to write 43% of all contracts bonds because the county commissioners have nothing to do with this. CONTRACTORS SELECT THEIR OWN BONDSMEN. With respect to insurance, the cost is the same no matter where placed and the taxpayers interests are not involved so long as the companies patronized are reliable concerns which meet their obligations promptly.

11. WHY do not the present County Commissioners, who so widely advertise themselves as builders, explain to the people why they build up the annual payroll in their own office from $62,997.70 in 1923, to $132,120.51 in 1926?

The increase in cost of overhead in the county commissioners' office under the present board represents additional activities and improved service to the public. The increased work performed by the commissioners (over 300% over previous administrations) together with the extension of the Purchasing Department, the Bureau of Statistics and Accounts, is a logical and justified increase in keeping with the progress of the county.

12. WHY has the County's business not been audited in eighteen years?

Who maintains that the county's business has not been audited every year for the last 18 years? On file with the Court of Common Pleas is a sworn audit report for each of those 18 years, prepared, compiled and submitted by such reputable citizens of Allegheny County as Franklin P. Booth, Robert J. Cunningham and John P. Moore, past County Controllers. Does the present Controller mean to infer that these men, whose names are highly revered, in this community, would file sworn statements without having had proper audits and unless assured of their accuracy? Does the present Controller infer that these men did not fulfill their duties as County Auditors? He has a right to say he has not fulfilled his duty as County Auditor and to repudiate his own sworn statement which is on file in court, but has he the right to cast reflections on the official reputations of those men who have occupied that high office in previous years, two of whom are no longer here to defend themselves from his aspersions?

E. V. Babcock

McGOVERN'S OATH CONTRADICTS HIS CAMPAIGN WORD

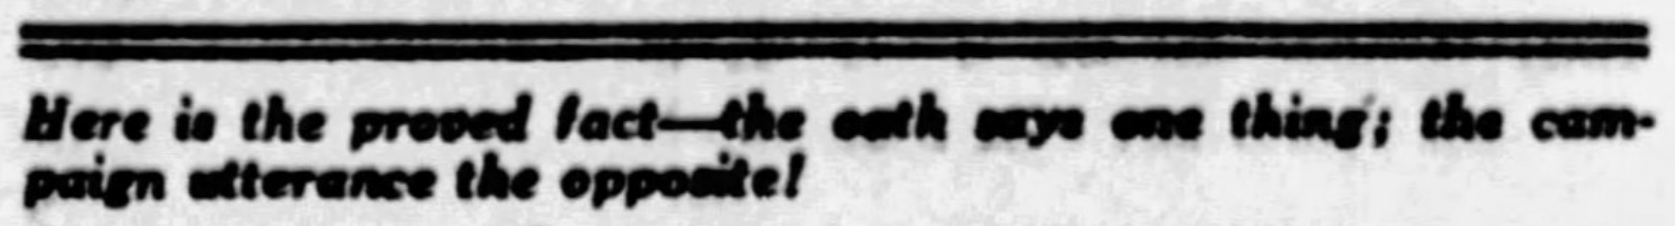
Photostatic copies of McGovern's oath before Judge McVicar in Common Pleas Court, stating his knowledge of the county's financial condition and declaring the county to have a commissioner's bonding margin of over $7,000,000.

Herewith are reproduced photostatic copies of the oath of Controller C. C. McGovern, before Judge Nelson McVicar, in Common Pleas Court. The act governing the Controller's duty specifies that he shall make a report stating the county's financial condition each year and that his oath must support the report.

The evidence supplied by these photostatic proofs that when the Controller was required to SWEAR to his assertion, he admitted complete knowledge of the county's financial condition cannot be questioned. It may also be found in his own annual report.

His campaign assertions, which he does NOT have to swear to, state the opposite of what his oath in court and his published report shows. Further evidence of evasion, if any is needed, is found in the fact that those statements in his report on which he based his campaign sensations, also ARE NOT SWORN TO.

Photostatic Reproductions of Controller's Oath Supporting Fiscal Report to Judges of Common Pleas Court

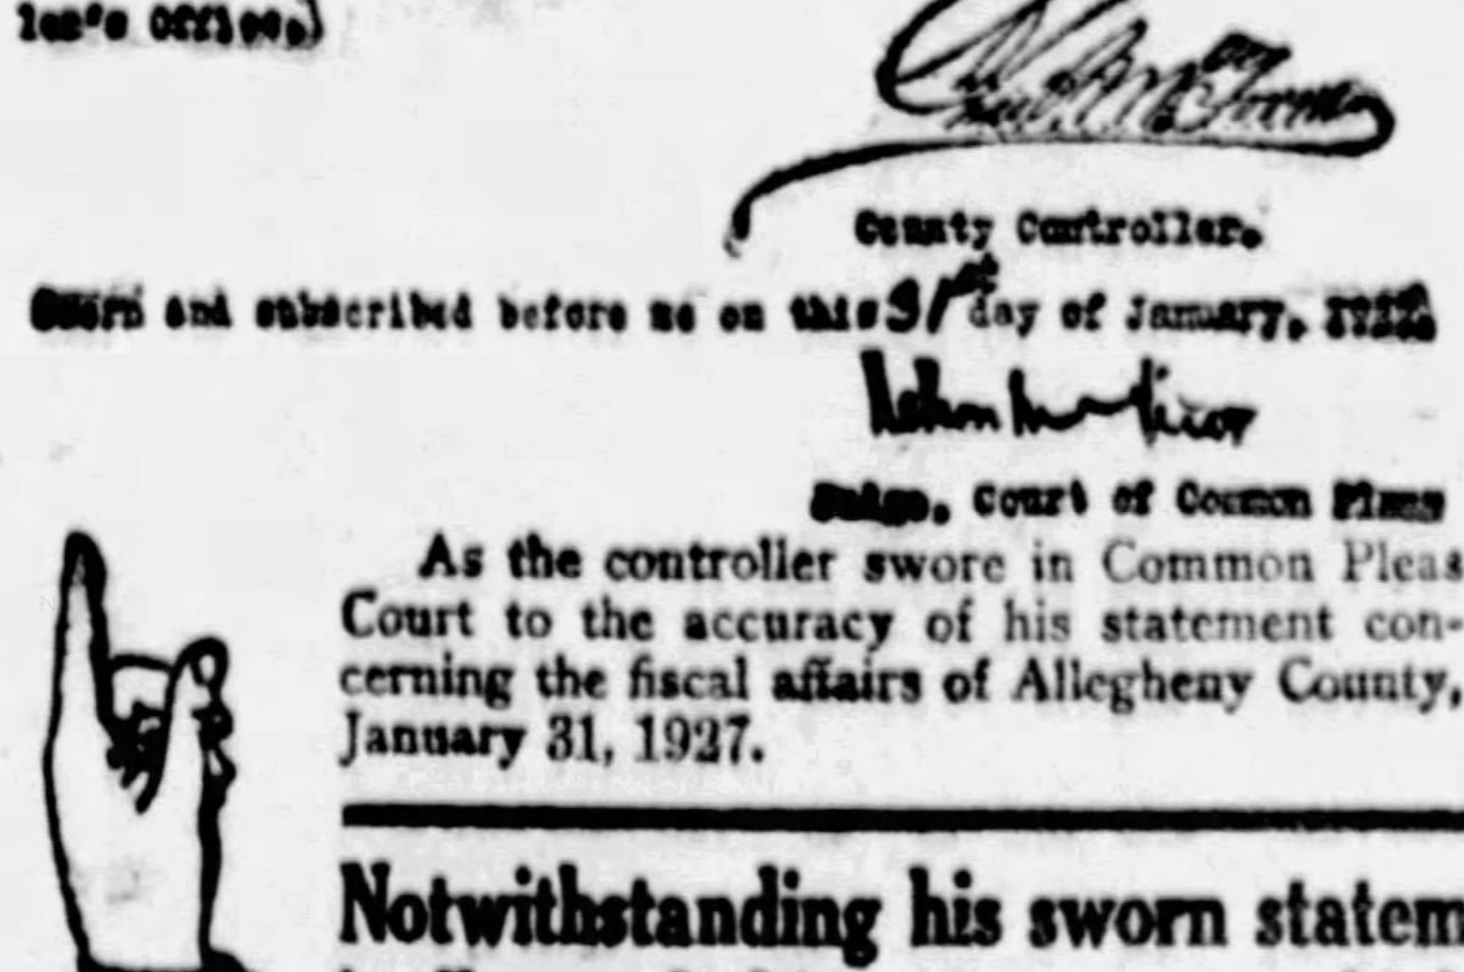


Photostatic reproduction of the county's financial condition, as sworn to by Controller McGovern and the oath attested to by Judge McVicar, the 31st day of January, 1927.

Here is the proved fact—the oath says one thing; the campaign utterance the opposite!

McGovern's contention of his inability to know the county's financial condition enabled him to hold up improvements in every part of the county. The advice of the more experienced commissioners that there WAS a bonding margin which would give the people the improvements they wanted and clamored for, was ignored by him.

Consider that for nearly a year he has held this rich county up to the nation as bankrupt—unable to issue $3,700,000 worth of bonds to finish important improvements which the people needed, and which were required to connect up the county's great highway system... Then study the dates of the facsimiles of his sworn statement in Common Pleas court. The comparison proves its own answer.



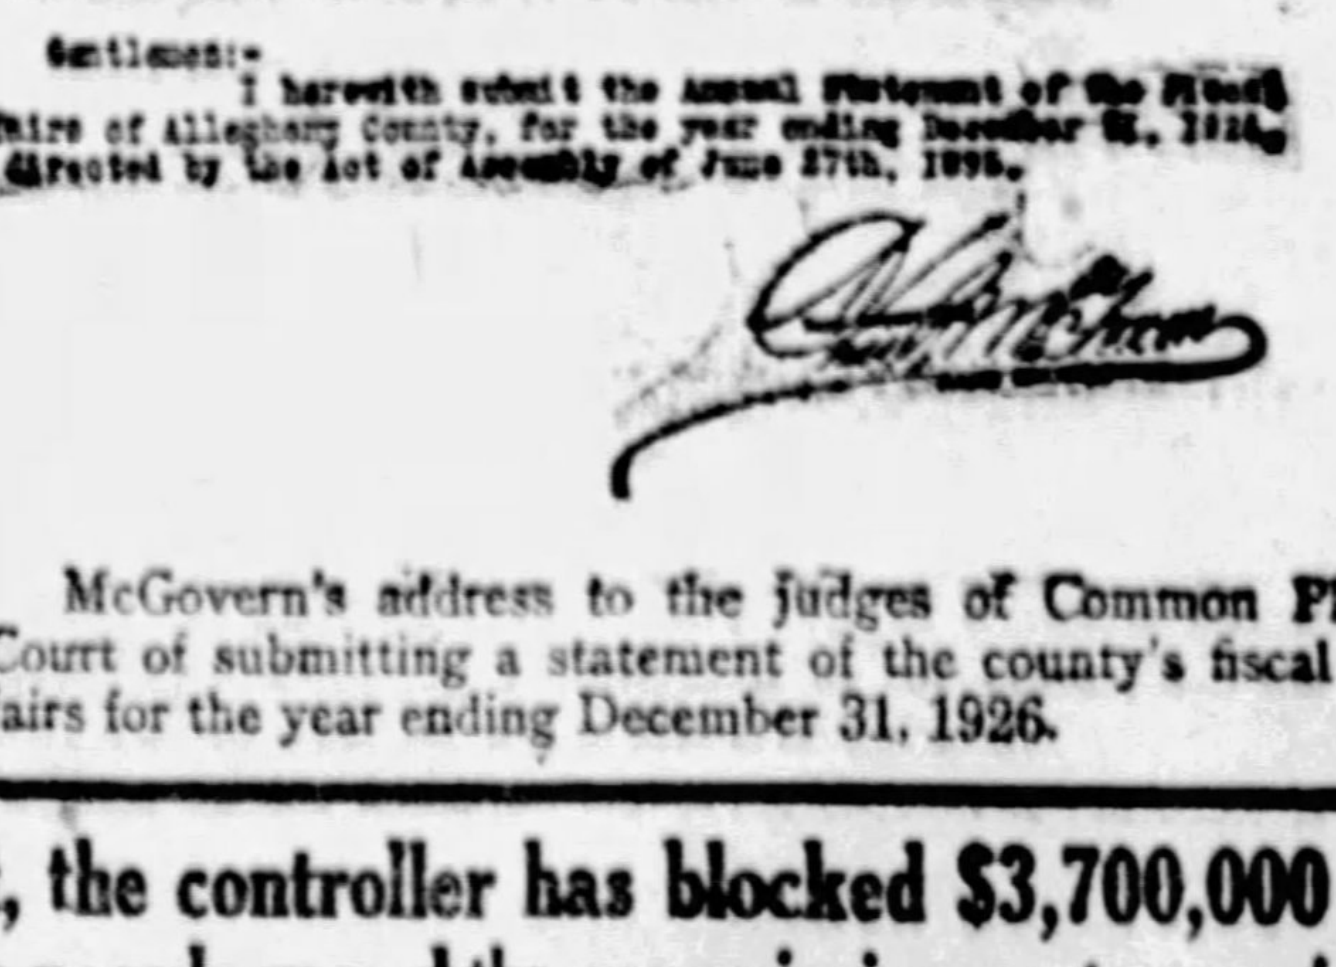
Personally appeared Charles C. McGovern, Controller of Allegheny County, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposes and said that the statement of Fiscal Affairs of said County for the year ending December 31st, 1926, submitted herewith, is correct and true, and is a true transcript of the books kept in the Controller's Office.

County Controller.

Sworn and subscribed before me on this 31st day of January, 1927.

Judge, Court of Common Pleas

As the controller swore in Common Pleas Court to the accuracy of his statement concerning the fiscal affairs of Allegheny County, January 31, 1927.



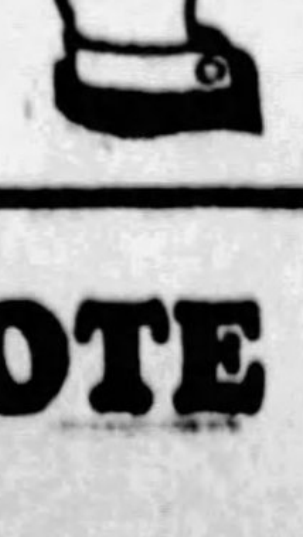
CONTROLLER'S REPORT

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas.

Gentlemen:-

I herewith submit the Annual Statement of the Fiscal Affairs of Allegheny County, for the year ending December 31, 1926, as directed by the Act of Assembly

McGovern's address to the Judges of Common Pleas Court of submitting a statement of the county's fiscal affairs for the year ending December 31, 1926.



Notwithstanding his sworn statement, the controller has blocked $3,700,000 of badly needed improvements which the people urged the commissioners to provide.

FOR THE WELFARE OF OUR COUNTY, VOTE THE REPUBLICAN (X)

Stocks Are Exciting More Controversy Than Trade.

By B. C. FORBES

BUSINESS conditions and prospects excite less difference of opinion than stock market conditions and prospects.

It is agreed that industry and trade are of moderately smaller volume than a year ago but compare favorably with the fall season of any other recent year. As for the outlook, pessimism is almost entirely absent. Opinions vary from the conservative to the ultra-optimistic.

BUT when you turn to the stock market you find controversy over both what has been happening and over what is likely to happen.

Your out-and-out Bull claims that there has been not real selling either by the rank and file of the public or by large investors. The market has merely had a "technical reaction," he breezily assures you, preparatory to a fresh advance which is going to carry stocks to heights never before approached. With call money going abegging at 3½ per cent and good bonds yielding the lowest returns in years, how can the stock market do other than advance and advance, he demands?

OTHERS less wilfully blind to actualities temper their reasoning by taking note of such developments as the considerable drop in railway freight and profits, the fall in iron and steel prices to the lowest level in recent years in conjunction with sharp shrinkage in output, the continued demoralization in the oil industry, the slackening in automobile sales, the cut in tire prices, the continued soft coal strike, the slight decrease in employment, the let-up in building activity at various points, the reaction in unimproved real estate in many places, the unsatisfactory commercial failure record, the reduction in savings banks deposits here and there, the lull in the very promising textile recovery, the poor reports from the lumber industry, the reduced net profits revealed by numbers of recent quarterly statements, to say nothing of the rather heavy gold exports to South America—Brazil alone is taking $35,000,000—and the approach of a presidential election not now regarded as containing no unsettling possibilities.

WHILE there have been few signs of stock selling by small investors, there have been indications of liquidation by numbers of very large holders. In high financial circles, I have been running into not a few men who have been lightening their loads because they feel that quotations for many stocks have been forced up too far by speculators. Certainly there must have been something besides short selling to cause a shrinkage of over one thousand million dollars last month in the market value of prominent stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Look at the extent of these declines in industrial stocks from their top for the year:

PUBLIC utilities have fared better, and many shrewd investors now favor this section of the market for the long pull. Even so, there have been at least moderate reactions, as these examples prove:

IN my opinion, the safest stocks are the ones which have been most neglected by the professional boomers, notably good oil shares and certain utilities whose earnings show steady gains.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The raw sugar market was quiet early today, and as no sales were reported, prices were unchanged at 4.58c for Cuban, duty paid. The undertone, however, was firmer, and holders were not inclined to offer at these levels.

The raw sugar futures market was firmer on covering and Cuban buying, as well as on [illegible] from European interests. Prices at [illegible] were 2 to 3 points net higher. The firmness was due to the firmer London market and to expectation of favorable developments in the world plan of sugar restrictions which is expected to be taken up this week between the Cuban representative, now abroad, and leading European sugar producers.

A fair inquiry was reported for refined sugar, with prices unchanged at 5.80c for fine granulated.

TREASURY PLAN STIMULATES STOCKS

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—(AP)—The recovery in stock prices, which set in last week, was continued today, with the demand stimulated by the favorable interpretation placed by most Wall street observers on the terms of the new government financing. Buying orders were distributed over a broad list, with the gains in the active issues running from 1 to 6 points.

A strong undertone was apparent for the high-grade industrials, although United States Steel common ran into a little selling after crossing 137. Expectations of an extra cash dividend of $2 early next year had a supporting influence on General Motors.

Pools, encouraged by the prospect of easy money rates for the next couple of months, started bidding up a number of specialties, in which favorable developments are believed to be pending. American Tobacco issues again established new record high levels, while among the many issues to cross their previous 1927 peaks, were R. H. Macy, Curley Co., Burroughs Adding Machine, Central Leather, American Linseed, Kennecott Copper and Warren Bros.

The sudden drop in temperature brought fresh buying into the eastern coalers, with Lackawanna and Delaware and Hudson in the forefront of the advance. The so-called "merger roads" also were in brisk demand under the leadership of Wabash common, Western Maryland, Gulf, Mobile and Northern and Kansas City Southern.

The reported discovery of a new oil field in the Seminole area had a depressing effect on the oil shares, which had shown an upward tendency of late on improved trade conditions.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

To Develop U. S.-Russian Trade.

Hugh L. Cooper, president of Hugh L. Cooper & Co., C. F. Whaley, president of Vacuum Oil Company, and Alexander Gumberg, vice president of the United States Company, have been elected directors of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, which has for its purpose the development of trade relations between the United States and Russia.

Leathers Improving.

Third quarter earnings reports of leather companies give hope to patient holders of these stocks of a return to normal in that industry. U. S. Leather had net profit of $2,112,560 for nine months this year, in contrast to a deficit of $751,461 a year ago. American Hide and Leather had third quarter net profit of $116,086 against net profit of $13,122 the quarter before and net loss of $97,175 in the third quarter of 1926.

—I—

Fisher's Index Lower.

Prof. Irving Fisher's commodity price index in past week was 141.2 per cent against 141.1 per cent the week before. Prof. Fisher's index number of stock market prices, based on 10 most active industrial stocks was 222.7 at the end of last week, as compared to 222.3 the week before.

—I—

Loft Sales Down.

Loft, Inc., reports October sales as $614,693, a decrease of $92,716 from the same period in 1926. Ten months sales dropped $315,167 to a total of $6,240,278.

—I—

Cotton Exports Decrease.

Cotton exports for week ended November 4 totaled 356,425 bales against 475,267 for same week last season. From August 1 shipments aggregated 2,333,916 bales against 2,627,112.

—I—

The Money Market.

Call money renewal rates were unchanged at 3½ per cent today. Preparations for the more than $1,000,000,000 turnover scheduled for November 15 will start toward the close of the week. It seems likely that collection of funds for such operation will not start in time to affect money rates this week, but their influence should be fully apparent a week from today. Any number of traders and brokers who turned "temporarily bullish" early last week set the limit to their optimism as of November 15. If they were to stick to their statement there will be considerable profit-taking during the current week to add to the settlement expected from the motor shares.

—I—

Woolworth Business Expands.

Sales of F. W. Woolworth Company for October crossed the $25,000,000 mark the first time for that month, reaching $26,431,744 compared with $24,402,181 in October, last year. The total for 10 months of 1927 rose to $205,119,179 from $198,714,511 in the corresponding 1926 period. October sales were $2,291,435 greater than in September. H. T. Parson, president, said 104 stores had been opened this year and one more to be opened this month would bring the chain to 1,545 stores in the United States, Canada and Cuba. By the end of December, 300 stores will be operating in Great Britain and eight in Germany. Forty-five stores already are under lease in the United States and Canada to be opened in 1928.

—I—

Metropolitan Stores.

Metropolitan Chain Stores October sales were $1,110,199, an increase of $72,442 over October, 1926. Ten months sales totaled $9,522,030, an increase of $97,024.

—I—

California Oil Production Off.

California crude oil production in week November 5 averaged 622,150 barrels daily, a decline of 6,450 barrels daily from the preceding week, and the lowest total since August 6.

—I—

Motors Hold Market Interest.

Automobile week in the stock market starts today the election day interruption tomorrow rendered the opening day's trading more or less meaningless insofar as a definite price trend is concerned. Right after the holiday two of the most important automobile meetings of the year will be held. They will be the sessions of directors of General Motors and of Chrysler. General Motors' directors get together after the close Thursday and the Chrysler board will meet the same day or Friday. During the past week there were new pools formed to work in a few of the lower priced motor shares and their operations promise to keep the motor group more in the limelight. There is also the probability of some official announcement from Ford. As a result of strong indications that earnings will approximate $13 a share for the common this year the General Motors directors are expected to put the stock on a $5 annual dividend basis and authorize a $2.50 extra payment for the quarter.

—I—

Will Test Price Structure.

The automobile meetings scheduled are most important in the test they will afford the stock market. Motor shares hold an important place in the commitments of the majority of stock market speculators. The developments from this week's meetings will be the last "good news" for a while and the manner in which the motor group responds will be of importance to the entire market. General Motors and the other leaders of the group will be watched closely, therefore, by many traders for a cue to the immediate market outlook. At the same time the new groups in some of the lower priced stocks promise continued activity. Group operations have been resumed in certain automobile accessory stocks also and their result will have material influence on speculative sentiment.

—I—

Youngstown Activities Slacken.

Of 53 independent open-hearth furnaces in the Youngstown district 35 will operate this week. A loss of two from last week. Trumbull Steel is scheduled for 60 per cent against 75 per cent last week. While Sharon Steel Hoop finishing mills are at capacity, with semi-finishing mills active at 70 per cent.

Last Offering on Second 4¼s.

The United States Treasury offering of $[illegible] notes today is the final phase of the Treasury financing which was started eight months ago to retire outstanding second Liberty 4¼s. Although the interest rate is not as low in this new offering as was the case in a few preceding offerings yet the saving to the government in interest will be over $1,[illegible].

—I—

Gain for Consolidated Cigar.

Consolidated Cigar Corporation reports for nine months ended September 30, net after interest, taxes, etc., equal to $7.35 a share against $1.19 a share in the same period in 1926.

—I—

Big Gain for Freeport Texas.

The Freeport Texas Company reports net profit for quarter ended August 31 of $1,102,727 after depreciation and taxes against $865,137 in the previous quarter and $512,716 for August quarter in 1926.

—I—

Wildcats in Seminole Area.

Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation has brought in its wildcat test three miles east of Little River pool in Seminole area for 60 barrels an hour, or about 1,500 barrels daily from the Wilcox sand. This test probably opens another pool in the Seminole area. It is the third wildcat test in the Seminole brought in within the last week. The two new oil pools will be pro rated to 100 barrels per day on the discovery wells.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Firm prices ruled the bond market at the opening of the new week, although transactions were limited by the disposition of many traders to stay out of the market until after election day. Announcement of the treasury's plan to issue $400,000,000 3½ per cent certificates in the refunding of the outstanding second Liberty 4¼s apparently did not effect an immediate stimulation to trading.

German bonds were offered rather freely, following publication of the exchange of notes by the Berlin government and S. Parker Gilbert, Agent General of Reparations. Prices, however, held steady. French obligations were firm, presumably reflecting the plan to refund the government's 6 per cent bonds with a new 5 per cent issue, effecting a large saving in interest.

Domestic railroads were moderately active and firm, "Katy" 4s sold at 93 for the first time this year, and Great Northern 4½s attained a new high at 100⅝. Rock Island issues were easy on realizing.

Goodyear 1s showed little immediate response to announcement of the company's plan to redeem half of the outstanding $15,000,000 on December 15, presumably at the call price of 103½. Other industrials and the public utility list followed a firm, though quiet trend. The bonds are currently quoted around 94⅛.

United States Government securities were inactive.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (sales omitted in sales column) (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Violent movements occurred in many stocks at frequent intervals on the curb market during the day, carrying many issues up to new high records, but the advances were offset to an extent by a development of weakness in the petroleum group. Some in which there was pronounced strength had a range of 10 to 15 points.

Tubize Artificial Silk, which was weak Saturday, advanced 9 points to the new peak of 356 and then dropped 16 points. Universal Leaf rose nearly 6 points and Celluloid moved up 3 points. Celanese was in special demand, advancing over 10 points, and the first preferred stock rose over 6 points. American Rolling Mills rose 2 points to a high record, at 86⅝. U. S. Gypsum was weak, falling 6 points, and St. Regis Paper dropped over a point.

There was heavy trading in many of the utilities in connection with the United Gas Improvement merger plan. That stock advanced a point to 160. Southeastern Power, in which transactions were on a large scale, rose 2 points, and the preferred stock made a new high record at 115. Power Securities preferred entered new high ground on an advance of 2½ points to 55⅝. Lehigh Power, which has been prominent for some time, was heavily traded and yielded a point. Blackstone Valley had a reaction of 4 points.

Oil stocks were influenced by reports of the opening up of three new pools in the Seminole district. Gulf Oil was under pressure, yielding 4 points, and Prairie Oil dropped over a point. Northern Pipe Line made a new high record on an advance of 2½ points to 92½, but Indiana Pipe Line, after moving up a point, lost its gain.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Following is the official list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (000 omitted in sales column in bond list):

Lone Star Gas Dull, Arkansas Firm

Trading was in very light volume during the early part of the session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. In the half hour immediately following the opening only one transaction was recorded. This was a sale of Lone Star Gas at a slight fraction under the figure prevailing at the close Saturday.

The sudden bulge which marked the late trading in Arkansas Gas in Saturday's session was not followed through this morning and bids and offers showed practically no change from the previous quotations. On Saturday several thousand shares of Arkansas changed hands in New York at $5 a share, with the stock reaching the same price here just a few minutes before the close. The amount of stock turned over during the bulge led several traders to believe that the much talked of deal involving sale of the company's gas properties had been closed, but there was no definite information available on the subject over the week-end.

Standard Sanitary came into the market firm at 104, but offerings of a few odd lots of the issue broke the price back a full point. There was no news to account for the recession and the same amount of stock changing were taken to indicate that no important holders were offering stock.

First sales of Arkansas Gas were unchanged at 5, but only a small supply was available at that figure, resulting in a small fractional advance. Westinghouse Air Brake was strong here in reflection of its upward movement in New York, where it advanced along with numerous other leading industrials.

American Window Glass Machine preferred continued lower on expectation of a suspension of the dividend. A small lot of the stock changed hands at 50, the lowest price reached so far on the move.

BISCUIT FIRMS TO MERGE

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Plans for a merger of eight large Middle Western biscuit companies, with the United Biscuit Company as the nucleus, were announced today in a letter from K. P. Maclellan, president, to stockholders of the latter concern. The combination is being effected through the formation of a new company, to be called the United Biscuit Company of America.

The merger involves the United Biscuit Company, operating in the St. Louis territory; Sawyer Biscuit Company, in the Chicago area, and Lakeside Biscuit Company of Toledo, all subsidiaries of the United Biscuit Company. Other concerns to be acquired are the Streitman Biscuit Company, Cincinnati; the Felber Biscuit Company, Columbus, O.; the Manchester Biscuit Company, Sioux Falls, S. D.; the Manchester Biscuit Company, Fargo, N. D., and the Merchants' Biscuit Company of Denver. In addition the Chicago Carton Company, manufacturer of containers, is to be taken over.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 13 to 19 points attributed to further covering by shorts in preparation for the local holiday tomorrow and the government crop report on Wednesday.

Unfavorable weather advances from the South including reports of frosts in the Carolinas and rains in Oklahoma probably stimulated the demand, but the advance to 21.00c for December and 21.21c for May met more Southern selling and there were reactions of 10 or 12 points before the end of the first hour.

A private crop report published before the opening placing the indicated yield at 13,117,000 bales compared with an estimate of 13,112,000 a month ago, appeared to be without much influence on the immediate market.

Trading was quiet later, prices sagging off under realizing or liquidation, apparently coupled with a little southern selling. At midday the market was ruling around [illegible] for December, or 17 points below the high level of the morning, the general list showing net advances of about 1 to 4 points.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Wheat scored an early advance today after a setback at the start. Fresh reports of frost and rust in Argentina were current, more than offsetting relative weakness of quotations at Liverpool. Opening ¼ to ⅝c down, Chicago wheat sagged a little further and then rose to well above Saturday's finish. Corn was strong, starting unchanged to ⅝c higher and subsequently climbing all around. Oats were firm. Provisions tilted upward.

At noon wheat was unchanged to ⅛c off, and corn at ⅜c to 1⅛c advance.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

RUM DEFENDANT ADMITS SUGAR, CORN DEALING

Charles Friedman of Versailles, alleged by the government to be leader of a bootleg liquor ring in the McKeesport district, on trial with 15 other defendants before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, today on the witness stand admitted he was a "corn, sugar and yeast" handler, and also sold tin cans, but made a general denial to the charges that he figured in illegal liquor traffic. He testified he received commissions for sale and collections in handling corn, sugar and yeast.

Friedman also denied having told Prohibition Agent William Marshall that he was implicated in a theft of 130 cases of whisky from Adam Dietrich of McKeesport, as was testified by the prohibition officer. Friedman said he was formerly in the bakery business and now engaged in purchasing bankrupt stores.

Harry Moscovitz, also known as Harry Moss, another defendant, admitted setting up a distilling plant on the Greenwalt farm just because he had a "crazy notion" and had borrowed the money from a McKeesport bank. He denied government testimony that he had offered Joseph A. Frayne and Archie Negleman $400 if they would not disturb his plant.

STRICT GUARD AT POLLS

The Allegheny County Elections Association will keep watch at the polls tomorrow just as it did at the primary election, officials of the organization have announced in letters sent out to thousands of voters.

"No effort will be spared to assure an honest return and exposure of election crookedness," the letter states. Those who may have "reasonable grounds for suspicion tomorrow" are asked to get in touch with the association headquarters in the House Building.

Similar letters have been sent out by the bar association of which A. M. Imbrie is chairman. Voters are asked to watch closely and promptly report any evidences of law violations which they may see at the polls. The committee will investigate all reports and the names of informants will be kept secret.

BUGS BAER Says

REPORTS escaping from Washington indicate that a jury consists of 11 good men and who?

One of the jurors in an autumn bribery case broadcasted the news that he was going to paint his barn in the spring and justice wants to know where he is going to get the shellac.

One bad apple doesn't spoil the barrel, but no harm is done if you spray the apple orchard with an investigation.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The big oil carnival is now postponed until January when footprints can be photographed in the snow.

The trial might have been continued sooner, but the judge wanted to see the Yale-Harvard football game, the lawyers wanted to be home for Thanksgiving, the jury desired to spend Christmas with the kiddies and the defendants were anxious to celebrate New Year's in the good old-fashioned way. It's a good thing that the Fourth happens in July and Mother's Day occurs in the spring.

The witnesses are scattered from Honolulu to Canada. The jury has been demobilized.

And the defendants would like to scatter too.

There has been some great detective work in this case. Seems that private detectives have been rubberfooting around gathering up the purchasable truth.

They shadowed everybody in Washington with the result that many motor cars were junked because the drivers were afraid to stop at oil stations.

After a while the citizens complained of the shadowing. So did the detectives. Seems that the government had violated the ethics of mail order sleuthing by putting Department of Justice men on the trail of the shadow grabbers.

A private gumster would nab a citizen, a secret service man would arrest the detective and a metropolitan policeman would hold all three until the Marines landed and the situation was well in hand.

The police blotter looked like Who's Who. Fortunately, one of the jurors got too happy and couldn't wait until twilight to tell his bedtime story.

So the case has been adjourned until January. The private detectives and secret service men will keep in shape by sneaking up on the tackling dummy at Annapolis Academy.

Eve of Election Brings No Light to Pierce Fog

Pittsburgh today emerges from the most bitter political struggle it has witnessed in many years. Tomorrow the voters decide the issue, centered in the choice of county commissioners. Really the question is one for the county at large to settle, but it is in Pittsburgh that the battle has waged. This city has seethed with steaming electioneering methods, charges and countercharges, crimination and recrimination, vituperation and mud.

It has not been edifying. The heat of the campaign, in some instances, has burned out the ties of long friendships. It has involved men and women who ordinarily keep long distances between themselves and politics. Most all—even the professional politicians—justify themselves through the fact—or assumption—that they are acting for the public good. And yet the public sees nothing clearly. The fog has not been lifted, nor will be until a calmer moment comes.

That is not because time enough has not been given to the campaign, but because time enough has not been given to TRUTH. Three months or more of the kind of campaign we have had and the public would be more confused about the situation than it is at present. Perhaps even that may be a political trick—who knows?

We have seen the spectacle of Federal officials here campaigning in what is purely a local question. There is an obvious impropriety in this in that unthinking voters may think that national prosperity is depending on the outcome or even that our President is concerned. Let it be said that Washington is quite willing that Allegheny county shall decide its own local questions.

So tomorrow we go to the polls. We have been enlightened not at all by those who have been vociferously pointing to this or that light. All of us shall make decision for some reason. Some because we shall respond to political dictation of one kind or another. Some, and we hope that "some" shall be in the majority, because of honest conviction that has resulted from a close personal study of all angles of the campaign.

As in the primary, the paramount matter is that the election be honestly conducted. If it is not, detection of guilt is certain and punishment of offenders is more than probable. That assurance has resulted for an aroused civic spirit. That much, at least, has been gained in behalf of good citizenship.

Banish Awkward Calendar And Establish Exact One

Business men are becoming tired of our awkward old calendar, the unequal divisions of which are the cause of much confusion. To avoid the nuisances which adherence to the calendar brings, many firms insist that some services be billed to them on a weekly ratio of the monthly rate regardless of whether the month ends in the middle of the week or not. When so many are acting so independently of the old calendar, it is evident that the movement for "calendar reform" is growing.

The sentiment of Pittsburgh business men is typically expressed by F. E. Troutman, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Plate Glass Company, who, in an article appearing in the Sun-Telegraph, said the present arrangement of months is purely arbitrary and not based on astronomical facts. He felt a change would be of decided advantage to industry.

Numerous methods of changing the calendar have been proposed by thoughtful men who have long recognized that the present division of the year into groups of days is not an efficient one. It is just an ancient heirloom which we have accepted and the time has come when we should throw it away.

The most logical and sensible plan presented is one proposing division of the year into 13 months of 28 days each, totaling 364 days. Each month would contain exactly four weeks and exactly four Sundays. Mondays, etc. No month would contain five Tuesdays, Wednesdays, etc., as is the case periodically in the present.

Under this plan every month would begin with a Sunday and end with a Saturday, or begin with a Monday, the first business day of the week and end with Sunday, the day of rest. It would bring exactness in place of inexactness insofar as a human agency is able to arrange for perfection.

As noted, the 13-month year takes care of only 364 days, the plan proposed being to "slough off" the extra day. It will just be banished from all consideration. We'll take a day at the close of the year and throw it away. Between the twenty-eighth of December and the first of January the sun will rise and set on a day that will not be in the calendar. We will call it Nonday—or something else—and celebrate. Every leap year we will put another Nonday between June and July.

Is this not much more sensible than having a month of 31 days followed by one of 28, as we have in the present calendar? Only respect for an outdated inheritance from the ancients could justify any answer except "yes."

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce pioneered for daylight saving. Many of its members are in favor of a 13-month year. They and all of us should agitate to have the Chamber take up and promote that much needed reform also.

Bears in the News

In these days of modernism, jazz, luxury and installments, a good, old-fashioned bear story in the news does not come amiss. The bear is the most beloved of the wild animals, and in the early days his place in the news was prominent. Civilization largely wiped him out as a public entertainer and he went the way of old-fashioned things.

However, just a day or two ago, David Winner, of Corning, N. Y., was eating his lunch on a pile of railroad ties when he was chased up a pole by a bear who had designs on the lunch. He was "treed" for two hours.

Sophisticated though we are, old-time things have a habit of coming back for a brief and refreshing reminder.

Another animal story. Only the other day Senator Norris came out as a candidate for President. But that's a Bull Moose story.

Programs May Improve

Commissioner Bellows can find many who will agree with him that the average radio programme department is "rotten." The word is easy to say when the comfortable listener has no part in the perplexity or cost of getting good features.

Of radio programmes, as of newspapers and hotel menus, we need to remember that each patron is a separate problem, no two tastes being alike.

Lovers of Bach scorn jazz, and vice versa. But if the broadcaster omitted both, what could be substituted?

Let us not be too critical of the gift horse. He may improve.

College Limitations

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Professor Lowell of Havard said the other day: "A college cannot educate the student."

Teachers put knowledge before you, but they cannot cause your brain to appropriate it.

As Dr. Johnson said about a certain definition in the dictionary which a young man said he could not understand, "I can supply the definition, but I cannot supply the brains to understand it."

A book called "Humanizing Education" lies upon my desk and it is a fierce attack upon all modern methods of education, some of it apparently well founded.

Doubtless there is much in the schools and colleges to be criticized.

A teacher who simply hears lessons and fits his pupils to the procrustean bed of preconceived ideas is a poor teacher.

But we must remember that the country is full of serious-minded teachers who are intelligently wrestling with the problem of education. They may know as much about it as the people who are finding fault with them.

Many teachers realize that a pupil is sent to school to be taught to think and not merely to memorize, and they are trying to train him to the business of thinking.

The upshot of it seems to be that it is the school's business to supply you with the materials for knowledge and to surround you with the proper atmosphere of learning, and to put you in contact with the men who have learned and know how to think.

But always the question is up, at the last analysis, to the pupil. He can use his material for original thought or he can be as dry-as-dust.

You can lead a horse up to water, but you can't make him drink.

So you can send your boy to a school, but you can't make him think.

A bright young lad is no better off anywhere than in school. If he does not train his mind there he is not going to train it anywhere. School remains the best place, on the whole, for a young man to pass his maturing years. It may swamp him and mislead him, but, on the contrary, it may stimulate him.

The question is not are the schools perfect, but have you anything better to offer?

Schools are progressing in methods like everything else and are becoming better all the time.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Old Relations

A RESUME of the principal sources of the conviction that there has been an anthropoid stage in human history, as given by Sir Arthur Keith in the recent remarkable address to the British Association, may be useful for many who desire to follow intelligently the wordy battle over the question of the "ape origin" of man. I have numbered and paragraphed the points.

First comes the unquestioned fact, discovered early in the twentieth century by Professor Nuttall, at Cambridge University, that the blood of man and that of the great anthropoid apes gives almost exactly the same chemical reactions—in which respect these two, man and ape, stand alone together.

Second, bacteriologists have found that the living body of the anthropoid ape exhibits almost the same susceptibilities to infections, and manifests the same reactions as does the living body of man.

Third, so alike are the brains of man and anthropoid in their structural organization that surgeons and physiologists transfer experimental observations from the one to the other.

Fourth, when the human embryo establishes itself in the womb it throws out structures of a most complex nature to effect a connection with the maternal body. The same elaborate processes occur in the anthropoid womb and in no other.

Fifth, we find the same vestigial structures in the body of man and anthropoid ape.

Sixth, the ape mother fondles, nurses, and suckles her young in the human manner.

And these, as Sir Arthur Keith adds, form but a tithe of the striking and intimate points in which man resembles the anthropoid ape.

With special regard to the brain, which all recognize as the seat of man's superiority to other animals, the following recent statement of Professor G. Elliot Smith is quoted: "No structure found in the brain of an ape is lacking in the human brain, and, on the other hand, the human brain reveals no formation of any sort that is not present in the brain of the gorilla or chimpanzee. . . . The only distinctive feature of the human brain is a quantitative one"—i. e., the human brain differs from the ape brain only in being larger.

To this Sir Arthur Keith adds for himself: "No matter what line of evidence we select to follow—evidence gathered by anatomists, by embryologists, by physiologists or by psychologists—we reach the conviction that man's brain has been evolved from that of an anthropoid ape, and that in the process no new structure has been introduced and no new or strange faculty interpolated."

I have italicised the last six words, whose meaning seems to be that the only difference between ape intelligence and human is, like the difference in brain, a matter of quantity. And since this gauntlet has been thrown to the opponents of the Darwinian idea, readers who expect to follow the controversy should also note this further assertion of Sir Arthur Keith's:

"When primates made their first appearance in geological records they were, one and all, small-brained. We have to recognize that the tendency to increase of brain which culminated in the production of the human organ was not confined to man's ancestry, but appeared in diverse branches of the mammalian stock at a corresponding period of the earth's history."

In other words man won a race in which he was not the only entry.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Don't Be an Ostrich!

DO YOU always cry or pout if your efforts pass unnoticed?

As a man you won't cry, but your sour grouch is just as hard to bear by those around you.

You want audible praise.

You want someone to pat you on the back constantly.

But your longing for applause need not make you disagreeable.

Few persons like to hear unfavorable comment.

The truer the criticism, the harder it pinches.

Yet the highest fees and the highest salaries go to the ones who have a reputation for telling the exact truth.

Don't be like an ostrich in regard to hearing the truth about yourself, your work or your accomplishments.

When life or death, success or failure, gain or loss, is concerned, you want the truth.

To deserve praise, you must learn to take galling and humiliating truths gracefully and convert them into top-notch success.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Rewards

THE best of all rewards, I hold, is not in yellow, minted gold wherewith to buy earth's gauds and toys, its fleeting pleasures, phantom joys. Some claim, of course, that with enough of this much-treasured, shining stuff all cares could soon be set aside, all wants and dreams be satisfied. And others say that fame's the thing to purchase bliss for crown or king; that through the world's acclaim alone a man can call true joy his own. With neither side can I agree, for such rewards are not for me; and, could I choose, I would not plead for boons that fill so many a need. Love's smile grows brighter far, I hold, than yellow gleams of minted gold, and sweeter than loud plaudits won, the inner voice which cries: "Well done!"

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Came Maj. Raymond Dickson from his ranch in Mexico as slickly habited as a Bond street dandy and surprisingly changed from when I last saw him, booted and spurred, roping calves on the pampas.

Through the town and a fellow, foxed with drink, hiccuped sneers at my spats, and if it was his intention to make me feel foolish, he did. And meeting Edwin Balmer, I told him his new book, "Dangerous Business," was the finest he had written since "Indian Drum," which was one of the best novels ever written.

In the evening to see George White's "Manhattan Mary," and George was in the box office and handed me the tickets and prankishly ushered us to our seats. And never have I seen Ed Wynn so hilariously droll. So to Jay C. Flippen's night club, and home to bed.

Handwriting experts uncover strange quirks of human perversity. That they retain any respect for humanity is remarkable. One tells me of a woman whose health was being wrecked by slimy insinuations by mail. All her personal movements, which were innocent enough, were interpreted into suspicions of infamy. Servants were discharged, but the letters continued. It developed the letters were written by her husband, to cover up his intrigues with a charmer. He kept his wife in such perpetual turmoil that she had no time to keep track of him.

Anonymous letter writers frequently print their missives in block letters, thereby expecting to foil recognition. The hand writing expert, given their real hand writing, can identify the block letters at almost a single microscopic glance. It was also stated that almost invariably the anonymous letter writer has a criminal record or criminal tendencies. He is never normal.

* * *

I once wrote an anonymous letter to the editor of the Gallipolis (O.) Journal, suggesting that the paper for that week had never been so newsy and breezy. That had been my first week as "the" reporter. The next day when I arrived in the office he looked up from his pile of proofs, peered over his glasses and remarked: "I got your letter." He never mentioned it again—and that cured me of anonymity.

* * *

That old story of the excited gentleman calling to the owner of the barking dog: "Call off your dog or I'll knock his head off," has a sequel in another excited gentleman at a theater box office shouting: "If you think you can sit me behind a post I'm a damn fool for $5.85!"

* * *

Perhaps this places him. He is the type who swashily cleans his teeth with a finger behind a napkin in a restaurant. "New York," he said, ripping a band from an expensive cigar, "is a town of easy marks. All you have to do is to brush upon etiquette and act refined." And that is a true incident.

George White probably has more fun out of the theatrical business than any producer. He loves to sell tickets and is usually in the box office at night. Sometimes he takes in tickets at the door. Other times he leads the orchestra or ushers downstairs or in the balcony. Indeed, he is all over the theater—winding up as an actual performer in a dance number. White is only a few years removed from those happy days when all Broadway knew him as "Swifty, the Messenger Boy." In those hallowed hours he was the nimblest buck and winger along the street, and often with a death message marked "Rush" would stop long enough to execute a neat jig for pitched pennies. Only Broadway could produce his like, and that is perhaps why he is one of its most interesting figures.

Tales That Are Told

Evil Spirits

McTHYRSTY had a visit from his country cousin, and to celebrate their first meeting in the great city he took her to a theater.

McThyrsty was very restless, and at the end of every act excused himself to his companion.

At the fourth interval she could hold her silence no longer and inquired, "What are ye daein' oot sae of'en, Geordie?"

"Oh, juist gettin' a taste o' the fresh air," he said, carelessly.

"I dinna ken aboot the taste o't," the girl replied, "but the smell's awfu' different tae what it is in the country."—London Tid Bits.

Frightening

AN old lady has a cottage near an airdrome.

At some light airplane trials an official was strolling past her cottage when he saw the old lady leaning over the gate.

"You are having a grand time, granny," he said, "with all these airplanes showing what they can do."

"I 'ates 'em," she said. "Ever since I was a little girl and a bee got into me petticoats I've 'ated things that buzzes."

No Check

A SON at college wrote to his father: "No mon, no fun, your son."

The father answered: "How sad, too bad, your dad."
